Inquiry Halts With Hughes Happy Over 'Vindication'

Hearing Recessed Until November 17; Ferguson Blames Absence of Meyer

The turbulent, star-studded investigation into the war contracts of Howard Hughes was abruptly called off yesterday until next November with the multimillionaire aviation genius claiming complete "vindication."

As Hughes waited to resume his testimony in the crowded Senate caucus room, Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the Senate War Investigating Committee announced that the hearing would recess until November 17, with Hughes as witness, because of the committee's inability to locate Johnny Meyer, Hughes' party-giving press agent.

The abrupt collapse of the hearing took Hughes completely by surprise. The lanky Texas flier insisted his story "wasn't half told" and termed "ridiculous" the use of Meyer's disappearance as a reason for the recess.

Takes Crack at Brewster

Grinning boyishly, the aircraft designer and movie producer turned to reporters to predict the hearing would never be resumed.

Asked if he would return without a subpena if the hearings do get under way again, Hughes replied:

"Hell, yes."

Obviously jubiliant, Hughes promptly took a husky swing at Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the full committee, for taking "a runout powder" and being "too cowardly to stay here and face the music."

While reporters looked on, Hughes took some paper and swiftly wrote out a statemet for the moving picture newsreels, tossing it over to his attorney, T. A. Slack, with the question:

"Here; is this libelous?"

Credits Public Opinion

Hughes contended that public opinion had forced the committee to call a halt to its inquiry into his 18-million-dollar war contract for a flying boat and the 21-million-dollar contract for the F-11, the photo-reconnaissance plane.

Following is the text of Hughes' statement:

"I have just been asked why I think the hearing was called off.

"I believe it was called off because the people of this country render the final decision in any controversy. The public is the final judge. It was very obvious from the time I first walked into this room that the public and the press were on my side.

"They believed that there was no justification for this investigation in the first place.

"As soon as Senator Brewster saw he was fighting a losing battle against public opinion he folded up and took a runout powder.

"Yes, when Senator Brewster headed for the backwoods of Maine that was the tip-off. Washington was getting too hot for him!

"There was no reason for the other Senators on this committee to continue his battle for him if he was too cowardly to stay here and face the music.

"The other Senators saw no reason to carry Senator Brewster's

Poison Ivy—Not Hughes, Made Ferguson Squirm

It wasn't Howard Hughes that made Senator Homer Ferguson squirm. It was poison ivy.

The Michigan Republican, chairman of the war inquiry subcommittee in charge of the Hughes war contract probe, made that plain yesterday.

As soon as he ordered the investigation recessed until November 17, he hurried to a hospital for treatment of poison ivy of the feet which he contracted a week ago. He said he would have gone sooner—if he hadn't been too busy with Hughes. After treatment, he returned to work.

Now Showing: The Outcast

Howard Hughes Describes Wartime Airplane 'Heartache'

FINAL CURTAIN?—Howard Hughes sits alone in the empty Senate Caucus Room after the abrupt adjournment of the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee's inquiry into his wartime plane contracts. Chairman Ferguson announced postponement of the hearing until fall. Hughes, however, predicted the hearing would not be resumed

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The abrupt ending of Senate hearings into his war contracts left Howard Hughes with part of his story still unheard yesterday.

In an exclusive interview with The Washington Post last night, the tall, thin planemaker told the story of "the two outcasts that got together" and his wartime "heartache" after they did.

The two outcasts were Howard Hughes, who admits he wasn't liked by the Army brass, and the Photo Reconnaissance Branch of the Army Air Forces, a neglected stepchild in the early days of the war.

"Was it White House pressure that induced the Air Forces to invest 21 million dollars in the Hughes F-11, 'the red hot wagon,' for the Photo Reconnaissance Branch?

"That's just silly," drawled the Texan, who started thinking about airplanes when 14 years old.

Did Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt and his mission recommend the Hughes plane because of the lavish party-giving of Johnny Meyer, chubby press agent for Hughes?

"Johnny Meyer and Roosevelt did become buddies and Meyer entertained him, but even before that Roosevelt was shouting to the housetops what a good airplane I had."

He wasnt' the only one. The other officers on that mission agreed.

"And why in hell shouldn't they?

"I don't build cluck airplanes."

Were Howard Hughes and Elliott Roosevelt—both of whom have sometimes, rightly or wrongly, been called playboys—friends before Roosevelt went out to California on August 9, 1942, to inspect Hughes plane?

"I had never met him before in my life."

This multi-millionaire airplane designer, who is so far from a playboy that he frequently works 20 hours a day, has a fierce, intense pride in his work, a love of the job which gives him a kind of poetic eloquence when he talks about it.

The plane that has become known as the F-11 is the outgrowth of a progressive series of designs Hughes commenced around 1932 to 1933.

On the witness stand in the Senate Cacus Room last Saturday, the plane manufacturer got an opportunity to talk about the first of this series, the H-I—, the plane that set a world speed record for a land plane.

He did not get a chance to point out that this plane had its novel features:

"1. It was the first completely flush-riveted and flush-joined airplane.

"2. It had the first power-operated hydraulic retractible landing gear.

"3. First jet-thrust exhaust stacks.

"4. First use of air inlets in the leading edge of the wing."

"And these items," he told The Washington Post, "have all become standard since."

He told the committee how dejected he was the Army refused this plane, although it took the Army eight years to equal its record.

He told of designing the next plane in the series—a two-engine interceptor, only to be ordered by the Army to "sit on his design" for four months. Meanwhile some of his engineers went to work for Lockheed and Lockheed came up with a similar revolutionary design and walked off with the prize. That "prize" became the world-famous P-38.

Then, Hughes told the committee

U. S., British Begin Ruhr Talks Today

Parley on Increasing Coal Production Is First in Series Of Major Meetings

By International News Service

First in a series of major conferences designed to tie the United States closer into Europe's desperate efforts to stave off economic collapse begins in Washington today with British and American experts seeking means of increasing Ruhr coal production.

The American and British governments agree that more German coal is urgently needed to revive European industries. They differ on how the Ruhr Valley coal fields should be administered.

Two other top-flight conferences are on the docket.

A delegation of British financial specialists is expected in Washington about August 26 to ask "liberalization" of some terms in the $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain.

The London government contends that without such relief Britain's dwindling dollar reserve will disappear, and with it her already badly disorganized trade balance.

Snyder, Truman Confer

(Secretary of the Treasury Snyder conferred with President Truman yesterday. Snyder is involved in preparations for talks on Britain's plea for relief from terms of the loan agreement to lessen the drain on the dwindling British supply of dollars.)

American, British and French representatives will meet within the next two weeks to debate a proposed increase in German heavy industrial production to spur European economic recovery.

The French object to Anglo-American desires for a 100 per cent increase in German steel production, fearing this would be a first step in rebuilding Germany's military potential.

Differ on Methods

Secretary of War Royal and Assistant Secretary of State Thorp head the American group in the Ruhr coal talks. Sir William Strang, chief political adviser to the British high command in Germany, is key spokesman for Great Britain.

The British insist that the Ruhr fields be nationalized; the United States holds they would operate more efficiently if German executives and miners with "know-how" were returned to the job.

France, who also wants a say-so on the Ruhr question, has been assured by Marshall that the French will be consulted before any decision is reached. The Paris government will not be represented at the conference table, however.

Lie Belittles War Fears in Dour Report

Far From Thoughts Of Leaders, He Says; U. N. Failures Laid To Political Complex

Lake Success, Aug. 11 (AP).—Secretary General Trygve Lie said today that the world political situation had failed to improve in the last year, but he could see no prospects of war.

"I do not believe that this present world situation is a threatening as it is often made out to be," he declared in his annual report to the United Nations General Assembly. "I am convinced that no responsible statesman in any country can, or does, contemplate the prospect of war."

In a generally pessimistic 83-page report, covering all activities of the peace agency for the last 12 months, Lie appealed to the 55 member nations for "a more general effort to explore and resolve the fears and conflicting interests which are at the root of our difficulties."

Puts Treaty Signing First

Lie said the U. N. was being frustrated by political quarrels among the great powers and stressed that a reconstructed global order depended first on signing of the main peace treaties.

He added that a "basic political situation which underlies and affects all international political and social activity" was blocking conclusion of the pacts and delaying progress in the U. N.

Noting that U. N. orgahs have held 1911 meetings in efforts to solve the complex problems of the world, Lie added:

"The developments of the year have revealed certain disturbing tendencies. In a number of instances in which a decision was taken on a general principle of considerable importance, the actual carrying out of the principle has been delayed or frustrated by the unwillingness of governments to take the necessary steps, or by their inability to agree on practical measures for execution."

Three Principal Failures:

Lie specifically mentioned atomic energy, arms reduction and Franco Spain. On the first two points, where Russia has consistantly opposed the majority, Lie said:

"The Atomic Energy Commission has worked hard and made some progress, but the complexity of the problem still presents many points of disagreement and delay. The Commission on Conventional Armaments (arms reduction) has made little progress beyond the adoption of a general plan of work.

"Thus the two most significant resolutions of the General Assembly still require positive implementation."

Calling attention to the fact that Argentina and the Dominican Republic had not notified him of compliance with an assembly recommendation for withdrawl of

The Federal Diary

Loyalty Probe Starts Monday; FBI Will Get Fingerprints

By Jerry Kluttz

The investigation of Federal workers under the President's loyalty program will get under way Monday, it was learned last night.

Under it, each Federal worker will be required to do the following:

(1) To be fingerprinted on a new form now being printed by the Government Printing Office, and,

(2) To identify and to give background information on himself on a new so-called "name form" which is also being printed.

Checks Mostly Routine

The name form will be used to check against the subversive files of the Civil Service Commission, FBI, and other Federal agencies.

The checks will be routine except in those cases where derogatory evidence is unearthed in Government files. The FBI will then make full field investigations of those cases and it will send reports of its findings to the Civil Service Commission which will, in turn, relay the reports to the agencies in which the employes are located for action, if any.

It will take nearly a year to check all the 1,850,000 Federal workers in this country. Each agency with less than 100 employes will be required to submit immediately fingerprints and "name forms" on all their employes.

All other agencies, however, will be allowed to stagger the workload by obtaining and submitting the records of 15 per cent of their employes each month.

Agencies Speed Plans

Each employe who will be on the rolls as of September 30 will be classified as an "incumbent." People who are hired after that date will be called "new employes" and a different procedure is to be worked out to handle their cases.

Plans for the program, it was learned, were revealed in detail by Civil Service officials last week at a meeting of the Federal Personnel Council. A score of agencies yesterday were speeding plans to set up units in their personnel offices to get the fingerprints and name forms of their employes. The task will require the duties of several thousand employes throughout the Federal service.

The names of the employes are to be taken from agency payrolls and the Civil Service Commission

Steelworkers Open Assault On Labor Law

Indorse CIO Funds Campaign to Elect 'Acceptable' Men

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11 (AP).—The CIO United Steelworkers of America today opened a national drive to elect an "acceptable Congress" by indorsing plans for a great mass registration drive and a campaign to collect $1 voluntary contributions from some 875,000 members.

About 520 of the union's district officers and leaders attended an all-day meeting which Philip Murray, president of both the CIO and the USWA, said "was devoted exclusively to considerations of those provisions of the Taft-Hartley law which have to do with politics."

Starts After Labor Day

Murray said the group "enthusiastically" indorsed the plans of the CIO's Political Action Committee for registration of unionists and for collecting funds in the union's drive to elect Congressmen who will repeal the Taft-Hartley law. The drive will get under way after Labor Day.

Murray said he welcomed a court test of the law, which he termed unconstitutional, and said that was why he readily urged support of favored candidates in elections in a Baltimore, Md., district and in the Berks-Lehigh County district in Pennsylvania.

Says It's Within Law

The CIO president also said "There is nothing in the (Taft-Hartley) law which prevents voluntary contributions." He added the money would be kept in separate treasuries other than those maintained for union funds and "may or may not be" used to make direct contributions to candidates or parties.

The Taft-Hartley law forbids use of union funds for political purposes.

The CIO Political Action Committee plans similar organization meetings among the United Electrical Workers, textile workers, clothing and United Auto Workers.

AFL Office Employes First to Submit Data

The AFL Office Employes International Union yesterday became the first union to file its financial report and constitution with the Labor Department under terms of the new Taft-Hartley law.

Unions which fail to provide the information have no recourse to the National Labor Relations Board after August 22, when the act becomes fully operative.

President Paul R. Hutchings of Milwaukee and Union Secretary-Treasurer J. Howard Hicks of Portland, Oreg., declined to make public the financial figures, but distributed copies of the union's constitution.

Japanese Loot To Help Revive Nippon Trade

MacArthur Authorized To Utilize Hoard Of Gold and Jewels

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Millions of dollars worth of gold and precious stones—loot gathered by Japan's armies in their march through the Indies and Philippines—will be used by Allied authorities to help finance a revival of Nipponese peacetime economy.

A policy decision handed down by the 11-nation Far Eastern Commission yesterday paves the way for General Douglas MacArthur to use these frozen assets.

The fortune in jewels now is cached in the Bank of Yokohama. Officials estimate that the treasure chests hold perhaps 150 millions in precious metals, commercial diamonds and fabulous necklaces, bracelets and rings.

Contributions Make Up Part

Part of this represents voluntary contributions by Japanese women to their government during the war. The rest is loot. The job of separating the stolen wealth from the gifts—and identification of the proper owners—will be a long and difficult job.

Meanwhile, the treasure chests lay idle and unproductive while American relief funds help feed the Japs. Under the Far Eastern Commission's policy ruling, all of the gems will be made available for MacArthur's use.

Some of the jewels will be sold, and others can be used as security for dollar loans. The dollar credits made available will form a revolving fund to be used by MacArthur to help revive Japanese foreign trade.

Claims to Be Considered

Claims for restitution of the stolen wealth will be considered. Ultimately the Dutch, French, British, Filipino and Chinese owners of the jewels who can identify their property will be recomponsed.

The value of the remainder will be distributed among the Allies as a part of reparations, it was said.

The FEC directive on "interim import-export policies for Japan" announces that private trade will be authorized "as soon as possible."

Rigid curbs will be imposed to prevent the development of Japan's war-making potential. However, exports of textiles and other goods in short supply in the Far East will be stimulated "to the maximum practicable extent."

Imports to be authorized will be held to those necessary to "prevent such widespread disease and unrest as would endanger the occupying forces," products required to accomplish occupation objectives and those requested by the Jap government.

Corn Outlook 628 Million Bushels Short Of 1946 Crop

Aug. 1 Estimate Dampens Hopes For High Level of Meat Production

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

This year's corn crop will fall 628 million bushels short of last year, the August 1 estimate of the Government Crop Reporting Board predicted yesterday.

The corn outlook dampened Government hopes for a high level of mean production for next year. It also dims chances for a material reduction in prices of meat and corn, both now at or near record levels, as long as consumer demand continues strong.

In reaching an estimate of 2639 million bushels for 1947, the board revised its July 15 figures downward 111 million bushels.

Drought Is New Factor

The extent of the drop of 628 million bushels compared with a year ago becomes more marked when it is compared with last year's export of grain—an overwhelming record for any country in all history—of approximately 500 million bushels.

Another serious aspect of yesterday's prediction lies in the the fact that it was based on the condition of the Nation's crop on August 1; day's prediction lies in the fact before the widespread drought, now in its third week in the corn belt, began to arouse fears among grain experts.

Wheat also took a small drop from the July 15 total, although it still stands as an all-time record. Wheat predictions are for 1427 million bushels, far above last year's previous high of 1155 million.

Meat production for the rest of 1947 is expected to be about as large as last year. But Agriculture Department officials have asserted that a corn crop of at least 2850 million bushels will be needed to maintain meat production, next year at the 1947 rate of consumption of about 155 pounds per capita.

The Government goal for corn this year was a crop of three billion, bushels, 350 million more than forecast yesterday.

Prospects for oats also are down. Yesterday's forecast was for 1223 million bushels, compared with 1247 forecast a month ago and 1509 million bushels last year.

Only minor changes over the July 1 prediction were announced in other grain crops.

Indian Hunters Get Bigger Game

Falling Arrow Finds Stolen Safe, Suspects

Amateur Sleuths Trap 2 Youths After Barb Falls in Suitland Woods

An arrow shot into the Suitland, Md., woods by a 10-year-old boy yesterday pinned down possible solution of a $2106 safe robbery here and brought about capture of two suspects.

The safe, weighing 300 pounds, was taken from the Howard Johnson restaurant, 3900 Pennsylvania ave. se., late Sunday night by robbers who climbed through an unlocked window.

It was found about 10 a. m., when William Tayman, 5240 Meadow View dr., Meadow View, Md., ran to retrieve the arrow he shot while hunting in the woods along the 5500 block of Suitland rd.

Indians and wild game were scarce while he hunted with Garry Clendening, 12, of 4801 Meadow View dr.

"That big box was the only thing we found all morning," Garry said.

Their find, reported to Grocer Hugh Haney, 5501 Suitland rd., touched off amateur sleuthing, furtive watching from concealed trees and combined efforts by Prince Georges and Washington police to effect capture of the two suspects.

One of the suspects was listed as Charles Richard Cook, 22, of 2025 38th st. se., a former cook at the restaurant. The second was a 17-year-old boy who, Washington police said, had admitted stealing his father's car to haul the safe to the woods. Both have admitted the robbery, police added.

When the young hunters' report reached Haney, he dispatched an employe, Robert T. Silver, 25, of 1407 14th st. nw., to keep an eye on the safe. After a two-hour vigil, Silver said, two youths arrived and began trying to open the strongbox. Silver was behind a fallen log, he reported, partly covered [illegible] leaves.

He stole stealthily away and [illegible] then returned Eugene Scott, of 107 Wodland rd., and Haney. [illegible]se" was armed. Haney

Can't Name Own Poison

Children May Drink Liquor In District Bars, Counsel Rules

It's all right for a minor to drink liquor in a District of Columbia bar, so long as he doesn't order it, pay for it, or have it set in front of him by the tavern keeper or his employe.

That is what Vernon West, Corporation Counsel for the District, said yesterday in an opinionn requested by the Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

West said that it would take "an army of dectectives" to catch every minor who drinks someone else's liquor in a public drinking place. This, he said, places an "impossible burden" on holders of liquor licenses, making them responsible for any drinking by minors whether the tavern keepers actually sell or serve minors liquor.

According to West's interpretation of the law, a boy or girl may go into a bar with an adult and legally drink if the adult orders and pays for the drink, and has it placed in front of him (the adult).

It isn't against the law, according to the ABC Act, West says, for a minor to drink whisky in a bar licensed to sell it. It is against the law for the bar employes to "sell or deliver" whisky to the minor.

Speaking as an individual, West declared, "For a child to drink with his parents is the greatest safeguard against drunkenness that I know of."

He stated that if public drinking is not allowed, "there is nothing in the world to stop a man from taking a girl off in a car with a fifth of liquor in his pocket."

Up to now, the act has been construed by the ABC to make any bar operator responsible for the consumption by a minor of alco-

Captain Jeopardized Lives Needlessly, Fire Marshal Says

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Fire Marshal Raymond C. Roberts yesterday charged Capt. William V. James, commanding officer of No. 18 Engine House, unnecessarily jeopardized the lives of men under him.

The allegation was brought out as Roberts testified at a Fire Department trial board hearing. Charges against James stem from an explosion at the engine house July 17 in which four firemen were injured.

The men had been cleaning and applying a preservative coating to a boiler in the basement, using a mixture of half gasoline and half oil. Gasoline fumes were ignited by a coal-burning stove nearby and a flash blast followed. One of the men, Acting Sergt. Clyde Fletcher, testified James had instructed him to use the mixture.

"In your opinion would you say that use of a mixture of half gasoline and half oil . . . within range of 20 feet of an open fire . . . was failure to exercise proper judgment?" Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward A. Bear, prosecuting the case, asked Roberts.

"Yes," the latter replied.

"Would you say such action unnecessarily jeopardized the lives and limbs of others?" Beard prodded.

Again Roberts answered in the affirmative. He also said "yes" to a third question: Whether he considered James failed to "take appropriate action to insure safety banner against an overwhelming avalanche of public opinion.

Hughes Claims 'Vindication' As Senate Inquiry Recesses

"I thought this investigation would drag my reputation through the mud but instead, due to the fact that the American public believes in fair play and because they supported me, I have more friends now than I ever had in my life.

"I want to thank the people of the country and the members of the press."

Pepper, O'Conor Concur

Public announcement that the hearing was called off came after a brief subcommittee hearing attended by Ferguson and Senators Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Herbert O'Conor (D., Md.).

Pepper said that Ferguson proposed the hearings be closed at this time, and that the Michigan Senator had proposed the November 17 date to resume.

The Democratic Senators acquiesced, he said.

Ferguson was reported to have made the decision while lying in bed Sunday night, treating his feet for poison ivy, which has given him severe discomfort for several days.

There was speculation around the Senate, however, that the GOP leadership believed the investigation had back-fired badly and urged that it be called off.

Color was lent to this theory by the fact that Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) had attended all of last Saturday's session, at which Hughes made a magnificent and almost poetic defense of the flying boat project.

From Augusta, Me., Brewster referred to Hughes charges of "cowardice" by claiming it was really Hughes who wanted the hearings called off.

Brewster predicted the subcommittee would resume its hearings and dig even deeper into the Hughes contracts with the Government.

He said that Hughes had urged six times that the Senate War Investigating Committee drop its inquiry into his 40-million-dollar war contracts. He said it appeared to him that Hughes "was crying 'enough' and throwing in the sponge."

Ferguson said there were two reasons for recessing the hearings:

Demands of other matters on the Senators' time and the committee's inability at present to locate Meyer, Hughes' publicity man, who has testified to spending some $164,000 "promoting his employer's planes by entertaining Army officers, Government officials and others.

Also in the wake of Ferguson's announcement were these other developments:

1. Col. James G. Hall, former chief of Army Air Forces photo reconnaissance, told reporters he had been denied a chance to reply to testimony that Meyer spent $3732 entertaining Hall and his associates.

Hall told a news conference he had received some entertainment from Meyer, but that it had never influenced his official decisions. He called the publicity man's spending figure "fantastic" and termed the Senate inquiry "a skunk circus which has been stinking up the entire Nation."

2. Russell Birdwell, Hollywood publicity man who once worked for Hughes, told reporters he would file a one-million-dollar libel suit against Noah Dietrich, official of the Hughes Tooy Co. Dietrich testified to the Senate committee last week that Birdwell acknowledged falsifying an expense account and making it appear that he had entertained Jesse Jones, former RFC chairman, while in Washington in 1942 on Hughes' behalf. Birdwell said he had entertained Jones and that Dietrich's statement was a libel.

3. In Chicago, Attorney General Clark, in response to a question from reporters, said the Justice Department would go ahead with an investigation of allegations by Brewster and Hughes while the Senate group's hearings are in recess.

Brewster has asked a Justice Department investigation of Hughes' charge that Brewster offered last winter to call off the inquiry if Hughes would agree to an airline merger. Brewster has denied that.

Bristling Lips Betray Hughes, Elliott, Psychologist Opines

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Elliott Roosevelt and Howard Hughes had new worries today.

James F. Bender, the sure-shot psychologist, has been after them with his spyglass.

"Mustaches," remarked Bender. "Aah. Let me study them."

Elliott's mustache is brushy, graying at the edges. Perhaps a little frayed in spots and reminds ful of a lazy man's lawn.

"It's his absolute desire to appear rugged," Bender said. "He wants to impress people with his strength. See the way he thrusts it forward into the camera? He's mighty proud of that hair."

It's More Romantic

As for Brother Hughes, well, let's see.

Bender, director of the National Institute for Human Relations, took a longer look. Obviously, Hughes presented a stiffer poblem.

"He is more subtle," Bender explained. "He obviously is not worried about impressing others; he's got too much money for that. See, he keeps his pretty finely trimmed."

Hughes wears his well-clipped because it's more romantic, Bender decided. The girls like him better that way. It goes well with the tall, dark and handsome type.

At 18, 40 and 65

Whereupon Bender launched into a general discussion of mustaches as worn by the ordinary garden variety man in the street.

"There are three periods in a man's life when he wishes to conceal his upper lip." Bender explained.

"Around 18 he gets the desire to prove he's a man.

"At 40, especially among men who have been very successful, he has a desire to appear more mature. He doesn't want folks to doubt his ability to handle the job.

"At 65 the old man suddenly decides to look more patriarchal. He wants people to know that he's the head of the tribe."

Brewster's Glabeous

Mustaches, said Bender, are also valued highly by hot trumpet players like Harry James, who find the hair serves as effective padding for the upper lip.

Bald-headed men (what about Senator Owen Brewster?) have a strong urge to grow either a mustache or whiskers because of their glabrous condition. That $10 word belongs strictly to Bender.

"It's just a pleasant wal of calling a man hairless," he said.

"I might add," added Bender, Brides Dislike 'em

"That the motherly type of woman as a rule does not like her man to grow a mustache. Whereas the play-girl type, out for a good time usually likes one as long as it's neat and doesn't flow all over the place."

Bender credits Darwin with the theory that women, down through the ages, have worked steadily to keep us poor men from having any hair left at all.

"When the time comes to marry" he said, "they'll always choose the less hairy ones."

According to the experts, if Howard Hughes wants to improve his chances of getting married, he can keep all those nice lovely dollars bills—but that ticklish mustache must come right off.

Man Kills Wife Rather Than Say 'Pretty Please'

Countersport, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—A 37-year-old woodchopper was held in Potter County jail today in the "pretty please" slaying of his wife.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Butler said George Henry Chapman admitted he shot and killed his wife, Minnie, also 37, when she insisted that he say "pretty please" after he asked her to hand him a clock.

The woman's body, clasping a dead dog in her arms, and the husband asleep beside her, was found last night in their one-room cabin. She had been shot in the head and heart. The pet dog also had been shot.

Butler said Chapman gavve this account of the shooting:

The couple began drinking Saturday night and continued on Sunday. Chapman noticed the clock had stopped and asked his wife to bring it to him. When she refused unless he would say "pretty please" he picked up a .22 caliber target pistol and fired. Then, remembering that his wife had once told him that "she thought so much of the dog that she wanted it buried with her when she died," Chapman shot the dog and placed it in her arms.

Meanwhile, Haney had called Prince Georges County police who notified police in Washington. The 11th Precinct Station sent Pvt. Raymond L. Eubank and Corpl. Robert W. Smith to join Prince Georges Detective Wilson Purdy.

Haney was in on the capture after 20-minutes chase through the woods. Police said neither suspect was armed and offered no resistence.

They admitted, police said late yesterday, they had hauled the safe, a crowbar and sledge hammer to the woods in the stolen car, then returned the car to a parking place near the restaurant. It was recovered there yesterday afternoon.

West's opinion on the legal interpretation of Section 20 was asked by the ABC after attorneys for the Mayflower Hotel Corporation had petitioned the board for dismissal of action against it involving sale of liquor to a minor.

The case in question happened September 13, 1946, and involved a young married woman, who testified that she had neither purchased nor consumed liquor, the attorneys said. They contended that the purpose of ABC Section 20 was to prevent the possibility of a "minor going into a place where alcoholic beverages were sold and making a purchase for himself."

Immediate effect of the new legal opinion is expected to be reconsideration of three cases now pending before the ABC board involving indirect sale of intoxicants to a minor. No suspensions now are in effect against tavern keepers for such violations, according to Alan Payne, chairman of the ABC board.

Payne admitted that the board in the past had construed Section 20 of the act to mean "service" to a minor in "any manner." He explained that a good many license holders had been prosecuted for allowing minors to drink, even though those minors had not made direct purchases of liquor.

tee, he decided to design and build "on my own initiative and money a plane so outstanding that the Army would have to accept it."

Talking with The Washington Post last night he amplified that a little:

"I wasn't particularly interested in making money out of this. There's a limited profit in Government contracts, anyway, if they are honestly carried out. I decided I would just like to design and build a ship so outstanding that it would prove they should have accepted the first one.

Gets in Bad with Army

"So that was the D-2. I am prepared to say without qualification that the D-2 when it flew very near the start of the war was the fastest airplane in existence at that time.

"It was a medium bomber, yes, it was faster than any pursuit ship or interceptor."

By this time, as Hughes explained on the witness stand, was in bad with the Army—very bad indeed.

This is where Johnny Meyer came in, Hughes said last night.

"I do not believe his entertainment of Air Corps officers and other Government officials has been any more expensive or elaborate than the entertainment extended by the other companies.

"However, even if it had been, I don't think it would have been unfair.

Arnold Sends Mission

Once again, the Army wouldn't take the D-2.

Then Gen. H. H. Arnold sent the mission headed by Col. Elliott Roosevelt to view the ship.

The photo reconnaissance service, Hughes said, "had been pushed around all through the early part of the war. They never did have a plane specifically designed for their use."

"This is what we have been looking for—this is the ideal ship," the reconnaissance group told Hughes.

"This plane had a super-charged cabin which was super-charged up to 40,000 feet, way above any pressure cabin I knew of at the time."

The "two outlaws" got together and the ship, recommended by the mission, was ordered.

"Then began the heartaches.

"They didn't give me a contract for the D-2 which would have enabled me to get them out during the war, because I was tooled up and ready to build that airplane.

Stalled for Year

"Instead, they stalled me a year before the letter of intent, and the letter of intent called for an airplane completely different from the D-2.

"It was to be built of metal instead of wood, well . . . it was just a whole new airplane . . . size of the wings was different . . . it was different in lots of ways.

"So I had to pitch in and design another plane. Let's call this one the F-11 design No. 1.

"I pitched in and when I had that design well along I was informed that the engines for the design would not be available. The manufacturer had stopped making them.

"The only other suitable engine was 50 per cent bigger. This necessitated another design which I will call F-11 design No. 2.

"Now, of course, everything was different—the wings were different, the tail was different, etc.

Bodyguards Keep Vigil at Dwelling Of Bugsy's Friend

Miami Beach, Aug. 11 (INS).—Day and night bodyguards continued on duty around her Sunset Island home today, but Virginia Hill denied that they were hired to protect her from possible gangland violence.

One of the private detectives who were hired to "stay within ten feet of Miss Hill at all times" said that the mysterious playgirl insisted she "wanted a security system, not to protect her from any sort of bodily harm, but to keep her from being bothered by morbid curiosity seekers."

Fire Destroys Barn At Harrisonburg

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—Flames touched off by lightning destroyed the barn on the farm owned by the Misses Edna and Mary Bader, 10 miles southeast of here last night, causing damage estimated by the owners at $12,000.

The Rockingham County fire truck rushed to the scene and prevented the blaze from spreading to other outbuildings and returned again today when the ruins continued smoldering.

Uranium Find Reported

Nanking, Aug. 11 (AP).—Central News Agency's Canton correspondent said today that rich uranium deposits had been discovered in the Kweichung-San mountain range near Kweilin, 250 miles northwest of Canton. The correspondent said the value of the ore was much higher than that of uranium found in Manchuria and north China.

Once-Timid Taggie Fears No Foe Now

Seattle (U.P.).—Taggie, a Persian cat belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Myron Miller of Seattle, is no sissy now.

The Millers say if Taggie's cultivation of friendship with birds has done nothing else, at least it's made a he-cat of him.

Mrs. Miller said the other cats in the neighborhood used to scare Taggie half to death. However, since he's been taking care of birds, Taggie will stand up to the biggest alley cat in the neighborhood.

At present, Taggie is taking care of two ducklings. Before that it was a pigeon and then a black swallow.

Wrestler Lands In Lap; Is Sued

Evansville, Ind. (U.P.).—Edmund J. Schmitt filed a $5000 suit against Ralph Garibaldi, a professional wrestler, for injuries received during an unscheduled ringside event.

Schmitt charged he was watching a wrestling match when Garibaldi flew through the ropes, landed in his lap, grabbed him in a strangle hold and pummeled him into unconsciousness.

Capt. Curtis Pitts, Indiana State wrestling commissioner, investigated the incident and announced the commission exonerated the wrestler because "Garibaldi had acted in self-defense."

4 Who Broke Jail in Mass. Still at Large

Salem, Mass., Aug. 11 (AP).—Four "tough guy" prisoners who escaped after controlling Essex County jail for an hour, in which they cracked the safe and changed into civilian clothes, were still at large tonight. Police theorized that the ringleader's gun may have been smuggled to him in a turkey dinner he had sent in yesterday.

The four prepared their leisurely dawn getaway after overpowering two guards by threatening them with the smuggled pistol and locking them in a cell. Then they waited the arrival of a jail steward whose sedan they used for fleeing.

The prison uniforms were discared in the jail's clothes room. There they changed into their own clothes after seizing other guns from the guards and robbing them of $100.

Sheriff Frank Raymond said the ringleader was James W. MacDonald, 20-year-old reformatory parolee of Worcester, Mass., and added:

"They're all tough guys and one of them has said before he dies he wants to knock off a cop."

The sheriff said prisoners awaiting court action were allowed to order their noon meal from outside and that MacDonald "didn't like the prison meals."

MacDonald is awaiting grand jury action on charges of larceny and carrying a revolver.

The others and the charges against them:

Richard Wysocki, 20, Salem, assault with intent to rape the daughter of a New Hampshire University professor; Joseph P. Bowers, 32, Salem, assault with intent to murder; Rudolph W. Limauro, 18, Lynn, Mass., serving 18 months for larceny.

Fairfax Tie To Be Settled By Lot Today

The winner of Fairfax County's scrambled House of Delegates primary race will be determined by lot here at 3 p. m. today "according to law."

Levin Nock Davis, secretary of the State Board of Elections, said official notification of the board's plan for the drawing went out yesterday to Delegate Edwin Lynch and former delegate Robert J. McCandlish, whose campaign for the Fairfax nomination to the House resulted in a 2853 tie vote.

Meanwhile, an answer to McCandlish's petition for a recount will be filed today by Lynch.

Lynch said he would not protest McCandlish's request for a recount, but would deny charges that polling judges erred in Lynch's favor in counting the votes.

Lynch also said that if he should lose in the drawing he would ask for a recount. He said that he doubted the legality of McCandlish's petition at this stage in the proceedings.

The law provides that only a losing candidate can ask for a recount, Lynch said. He thought that if McCandlish should win the drawing, his petition, which he said he had filed to save time later, would be thrown out of court. McCandlish, just off on his vacation, was not available for comment.

Barber Shop Song Birds in Preview Of Fall Concert

The Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Singing in America turned the clock back last night at their regular Monday evening song fest at Pierce Hall, singing old-time favorites in a preview of the "Harvest of Harmony" concert at Constitution Hall, Oct. 24.

Peggy Wilson, "Miss Greater Washington of 1947" and daughter of a member, Comdr. F. Stirling Wilson, was crowned the "Sweetheart of Washington Barbershoppers" at the meeting attended by more than 50 members.

Louis Metcalf, president of the Washington chapter of the national society which boasts of 25,000 members, reviewed plans for the Constitution Hall meeting in the fall. The society's champion quartet from Elkhart, Ind., "The Doctors of Harmony," will appear, together with six local quartets from Washington.

Churchill Assails Job Control Plan

Labor Party's Program Would Pave Way for Serfdom, He Tells Commons

London, Aug. 11 (U.P.)—Winston Churchill said today that the Labor cabinet in its emergency bill designed to meet the economic crisis sought "power such as no government in this island has ever before dared to demand, except when enemies' bayonets were at our throats."

The Conservative leader, unsparingly denouncing the bill, spoke in Commons a few hours after Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee won a narrow victory in a Labor Party caucus against a left-wing move to prevent postponement in the government's nationalization program.

Criticising the clause of the bill which gives the government power to shift workers from one job to another, Churchill said:

"This press gang of snoopers is to go around the country to find means of taking working people from their existing conditions and sending them, against their will or without their consent, to other industries.

Plan Compared to Serfdom

"You are endeavoring to establish the power for serfdom of the working class in time of peace without even giving them the right to be protected by Parliaments."

Churchill said cabinet members had shown themselves to be men of "experience and self-restraint," but he said, they might be overthrown in their own party.

"The present Prime Minister may be discarded as lacking in color, or for some other reason," he said, "although I thought that his color was pretty red anyhow. In his place, we may have the Minister of Health (Aneurin Bevan) or someone like him to exercise these powers. They could be used with any amount of political spite.

"The Home Secretary (James Chuter Ede) used language the other night (in debate) very similar to that of Hitler. I do not think he is a second Hitler. I do not think the honorable gentlemen opposite are likely to be second Hitlers. They may use his words, but they have not the guts nor, I am glad to say, the criminality."

Laborite Assails U. S.

Laborite Samuel Silverman caused an uproar when he attacked prewar American policy and called the United States "a shabby money lender."

At the shouted demand of the Conservatives, Silverman withdrew this remark, but said Britain "had to borrow money on American terms, spend the money in their shop and after we had done that they raised prices against us."

Commons defeated, 256 to 125, a Liberal amendment to clarify the provisions of the bill.

At this point Capt. A. R. Blackburn, a Labor member, announced:

"I propose to vote with the opposition in this matter because this is a totalitarian measure."

This was an indication of the temper of Labor "back benchers," some of whom are almost as unhappy as the Conservatives over the government's handling of the economic crisis.

Caucus Vote Reported 81-77

A Labor Party source said that at the caucus Attlee won by 81 to 77, a technical vote of confidence. The vote was to postpone any demand for nationalization of industry in the next parliamentary session until the government announced whether it wants postponement.

But although Attlee won the uncomfortably small margin of four votes, about 80 members abstained in silent disapproval of the possibility that nationalization, especially of the iron and steel industries, may be postponed because of the crisis.

Herbert Morrison, leader of the House, told the caucus that the government was sticking to its nationalization program but that it was up to the cabinet, not the party, to decide on the time-table and priorities.

The caucus was held on the demand of 150 left-wingers who sought to force a showdown with the cabinet on reports—mostly in Conservative newspapers—that the nationalization of the steel and iron industries would be postponed.

Now the government's decision may not be known until the opening of the next session of Parliament October 21.

Left-Wingers Demand Action

Left-wingers said that if the Government does not include the nationalization in its program they will introduce an amendment seeking to force it to do so.

Health Minister Bevan was reported to be leading the demand for early nationalization. It was said also that he threatened at a recent cabinet meeting to resign if nationalization was postponed.

Left-wingers also demanded at the caucus that the Government make even greater reductions in the armed forces and resume trade negotiations with Russia.

The "rebels" held that the armed forces must be reduced to a total of 840,000 by March, 1948, instead of the 1,070,000 as the Government plans.

Rebel Drive On Asuncion Held Stemmed

Asuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 11 (U.P.)—The high command today claimed the rebel drive on Asuncion, which carried partisans into the outskirts of the capital, had been stemmed and reinforcements had reached Limpio, 15 miles northwest.

(A report from Formosa, Argentina, said foreign diplomats had returned to Asuncion, after escorting their families to safety. Radio broadcasts from both sides announced important victories, but gave na details.)

The communique said the hastily improvised Second Army Corps, which contains civilian draftees, halted the rebel advance with a series of "brilliant counter-attacks."

It said the First Army Corps, which yesterday was reported in Concepcion, 150 miles to the north, had concluded a fast march south and engaged the rebel rearguard near Limpio, trapping the partisans between two lines of fire.

The communique presented a striking contrast to the somber proclamation issued last night which asserted Asuncion was protected by a "belt or iron" and called on all citizens to remain at their posts and stay calm. It was the first official admission rebel units had penetrated to the outskirts.

Bilbo Undergoing Tests, Hospital Reports

New Orleans, Aug. 11 (AP).—Senator Theo G. Bilbo is undergoing a series of tests at Oschner Foundation Hospital here, but "there is nothing to be alarmed about," attaches said today.

The Senator is not being allowed to have visitors, the hospital said, not because of his condition but because visitors might disturb him and "keep the tests from showing a true picture."

Much of the Senator's lower jaw was removed in a previous operation to remove a malignant growth in his mouth.

Indonesian Republicans Give Views on War to U. S. Consul

Batavia, Java, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Republican viewpoint in the Dutch-Indonesian conflict was outlined today at a conference of U. S. Consul General Walter A. Foote with Republican leaders in Jogjakarta.

The conference was the first contact between the U. S. representative and Republican leaders since both the Dutch and Indonesians accepted American good offices in an attempt to restore peace in the Indies.

Foote conferred for three hours with President Soekarno and Premier Amir Sjarifoeddin, afterward flying back to Batavia.

He indicated that any return to the Republican capital for further talks "depends on Washington." The Republican cabinet met immediately after Foote departed.

Despite the recent fighting on the approaches to Jagjakarta, the Republican officials extended diplomatic honors to the American representative. He was met at the capital's airfield—the roads to which were choked with barricades for a last-ditch defense of Jogjakarta should it be attacked—by Dr. A. G. Pringgodigdo, Republican Secretary of State, and an honor guard.

Soekarno entertained Foote at a luncheon in the palace attended by leading cabinet members and high army and air force officers.

Dutch Report Shooting

Meanwhile, the Republican government announced it would pay indemnity to all rightful owners for all foreign properties, except "enemy" (Dutch) properties, destroyed by or in the course of hostilities."

The Dutch army said today that Republican forces had heavily machinegunned Pameskan, capital of the island of Madoera, just east of Java, yesterday. The Dutch also claimed that Republican scorched-earth tactics were continuing in west Java.

The Indonesians also were charged in the Dutch communique with new cease-fire violations in both Java and Sumatra.

Adm. Rosendahl To Get Medal After 22 Years

By The Associated Press

The man who has been called "the Navy's Billy Mitchell" will receive two medals today, winding up a controversy that has long smoldered within the Navy Department.

Vice Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl, retired, the Navy's foremost champion of dirigibles and one of the world's authorities on lighter-than-air craft, will get a Distinguished Flying Cross for saving the lives of six men when the airship Shenandoah broke in two September 4, 1925.

It took an act of Congress to award the DFC to Rosendahl after nearly 22 years.

In addition, a Distinguished Service Medal will be presented to him for directing anti-submarine blimp training during the war.

Rosendahl, unlike the Army's outspoken Billy Mitchell, was not read out of the service, but his views on the use of airships set many an old-line admiral fuming.

Rosendahl was advanced to vice admiral on his retirement last November after 36 years in the Navy.

Lie Belittles Fears of War

ambassadors and ministers from Madrid, Lie said:

"The problem of Franco Spain cannot yet be said to be satisfactorily resolved in the spirit of the resolution passed by the General Assembly."

Blames "Political Complex"

"The world political situation has not improved in the last year in spite of the fact that conditions at the beginning of 1947 appeared more hopeful," Lie said. "Of outstanding significance is the fact that the main peace treaties still remain undrafted and unsigned, and that no agreement has yet been reached even on some of their fundamental principles.

"The importance of these treaties, not only to the future of the United Nations, but to the future of the whole world, cannot be overemphasized. They are prerequisite of a reconstructed world order."

He added that events have shown that the treaty differences are "part of a larger political complex which operates to delay and frustrate this endeavor as it was operated in some affairs of the United Nations."

Mentions Marshall Plan

Lie referred to the Marshall Plan only once, declaring that "important discussions are still in progress with regard to the economic problems of Europe and their relation to assistance from the United States." He did not mention the Truman program of aid to Greece and Turkey.

However, in another section of his report the secretary general said:

"The United Nations has made great strides in setting up international machinery for the handling of world political, economic and social problems. It is now possible to say that, with the cooperation of member governments, the United Nations is equipped to undertake responsibility for the handling of problems in these fields."

The annual report, circulated to the 55-member governments, will be considered by the assembly at its fall meeting opening September 16.

$7,550,000 Fund Studied by Va. U.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—Administration and faculty members of the University of Irginia began work today on a plan which they hope will bring $7,550,000 into the school's development fund.

Admiral William F. Halsey, fund chairman, said the money will be used on seven projects, four for university expansion and three for established departments and schools. More money will be added to the quota to finance supplementary faculty salaries as soon as officials decide how much is needed.

Under the leadership of Admiral Halsey, the development fund campaign will be conducted through an organization which eventually will include regional and local chairman and workers picked from the university's 18,000 alumni.

Durant Leaves Europe for N. Y.; Loses 14 Years

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 11 (U.P.)—Col. Jack W. Durant of Falls Church, Va., convicted for his role in the theft of the $1,500,000 Hessian crown jewels, left here today, under armed guard, by plane for New York.

Durant, one of three American officers found guilty of stealing the fabulous jewel hoard, is to be remanded into the custody of the First Army. The review of his case was completed two weeks ago, when the 15-year jail sentence imposed by the courtmartial was reduced to 14 years.

Durant's wife, former WAC Capt. Kathleen Nash Durant, and Maj. David Watson, the other two convicted, are serving terms of five and three years, respectively.

Calif. Color Line Law On Marriage Tested

San Francisco, Aug. 11 (AP).—The State law forbidding the intermarriage of white persons and Negroes was challenged today in the California Supreme Court.

A petition for a writ of mandate filed by Sylvester S. Davis, jr. and Miss Andrea D. Perez demanded that the Supreme Court direct J. F. Morony, Los Angeles County clerk, to issue a marriage license to them. It identified Davis as a Negro, Miss Perez as a white woman.

The petition declared the law interferes with their religious rights and violates the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

Risk of Lives Held Needless and proper maintenance of personnal and property."

(James is being tried on these three charges. If found guilty, he faces a penalty which may range from a fine to dismissal from the department.)

Roberts identified a bulletin sent out by the National Fire Underwriters Association to fire departments, containing material on the dangers of gas vapors and the low flash point of such vapors.

He said that in his opinion firemen holding the rank of captain or better should "be familiar with the general terms" of the bulletins.

The bulletins were held inadmissible as evidence after Defense Counsel George McNeil pointed out they were "not regulation" and "no more binding than a news story" on fire problems.

Capt. Leiper F. Price, No. 11 Engine House, first defense witness, testified that it was "common practice" in the fire department to use gasoline as a cleaning agent.

"Is it common practice to use a mixture of gasoline and oil to clean boilers?" Beard pursued.

White Corroborates

Although Price testified that a fireman assigned to a specific task is supposed to use his own judgment in accomplishing the mission, he admitted under cross-examination that captains are obliged to know the dangerous propensities of gasoline.

Questioned about the material in the underwriters' bulletin, he replied: "We are governed by such bulletins."

Earlier, Fletcher's testimony that he had been instructed by James to use the gas-oil mixture, was corroborated by Pvt. James K. White, 27, of 453 Mellon st. se. White told the court he overheard James give the order. White also suffered burns in the blast.

Pvt. Harry E. Jones, 31, of 1705 Capitol ave. ne., another who was burned, said he operated a Johnson hand pump to spray the mixture while Fletcher handled the nozzle.

James to Testify

The fourth fireman injured, Pvt. Calvin B. Green, 23, of 1501 22d st. se., did not testify.

The trial, held in No. 16 Engine House, 1018 13th st. nw., opened with defense counsel protesting the seating of Battalion Chief M. E. Bowen as trial board member.

James, McNeil said, had "no confidence" in Bowen "in this matter." The protest was disallowed.

Nazi Bomb Fished Up

Liverpool, England, Aug. 11 (U.P.). A dredger clearing sand from the harbor bed between two big merchant ships brought up a 500-pound German time bomb today. Four hundred sailors and the dock workers in the area took the rest of the day off.

Others on the board are Irving Bryan, assistant corporation counsel, chairman, and R. L. Mudd, first assistant District auditor.

Renah F. Camalier, also representing James, announced that the accused captain would take the witness stand "first thing" this morning. Other defense witnesses to be called includes Deputy Chief J. A. Mayhew and four battalion chiefs. The proceedings will reopen at 10 a. m. today.

Corn, Other Area Crops Above U. S. Average

Crops in the area surrounding Washington are generally above the Nation's average, the monthly estimate of the Government Crop Reporting Board said yesterday.

The Maryland and Virginia corn crop is running about the same as a year ago, in contrast to short crops in other parts of the country.

In some sections of Virginia, however, the report says the apple crop may be the smallest in 26 years, although peaches will be above average but considerably under a year ago.

At the same time the Department of Agriculture predicted the summer commercial truck crops would be about 11 per cent below last year, but 15 per cent above the 1936-45 average.

Wet Weather Aids Bugs

In reporting on fruit prospects in the Washington area, the board stated:

"The Maryland apple crop improved during July as ample rainfall aided sizing. Spray programs were interrupted by wet weather and some orchards are showing heavy insect infestation.

"Virginia's relatively small apple crop is set irregularly by orchards and communities, except that hillside and mountain orchards generally have the best set, while many valley orchards are bare.

"Growers in the Winchester district estimate the smallest crop in 26 years. Best prospects in Virginia are in Patrick, Franklin, Bedford, Roanoke and Botetourt Counties.

"Summer varieties have been marketed and picking of Grimes and Jonathan will begin about September 1. Delicious apples will be ready during September and growers will start harvesting Yorks about October 1.

Apples Spotty in West Virginia

"In West Virginia the apple crop is very spotted—many orchards set little or no fruit while others have nearly a full crop. Golden Delicious appear to have set the heaviest of all important varieties. Harvesting of Transparent and Wealthies is completed. In a few days growers will start picking Northwest Greenings and McIntosh varieties, and by September 1 will be harvesting Grimes and Jonathan."

On the other hand the local crop of peaches is expected to be average or above. The board reports:

"Virginia expects 1,800,000 bushels, 40 per cent above average but only about two thirds of last year's record. Marketings of early peaches occurred during July, but the peak of Georgia Belle harvest will occur around mid-August, and of Elbertas from August 15 to 25. This is about 10 days later than usual.

"West Virginia has about an average-size crop and Maryland about a tenth below average, with most active harvest expected in both States the last week of August and the first few days of September.

Delaware Peaches Short

"The Delaware crop is very short, only two-fifths of average."

The Maryland tobacco crop is expected to yield 34,560,000 pounds, against 40,500,000 last year and an average for 1936-45 of 28,499,000 pounds.

West Virginia tobacco is estimated at 3,080,000 pounds against last year's 3,424,000 and an average of 2,684,000.

As to potatoes, the report states that in Pennsylvania, favorable temperatures "and adequate rainfall stimulated growth during July, and the crop, though planted late, is in good condition."

Rains Increase Size of Spuds

The report predicts "higher yields indicated for Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey." In Maryland and Virginia, "rains delayed harvest and permitted tubers to add much additional tonnage."

The potato crop is the Washington area was estimated as follows:

Maryland: 2,102,000 bushels, against 2,244,000 last year and 2,246,000 average.

Virginia: 8,742,000 against 10,676,000 last year and 8,706,000 average.

In July Virginia established new records in milk production for any month. The July production was 187 million pounds against 185 million in July a year ago and a 10-year average of 155 million.

Pennsylvania produced 515 million pounds in July against 489 million a year ago and 438 million 10-year average.

CORN

Delaware: 4,620,000 bushels; last year, 4,536,000 bushels; average, 3,894,000 bushels.

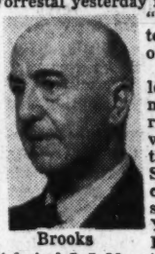
Navy Engineer Commended for 40 Years Service

Charles W. Brooks, 68, 3005 Porter st. nw., received the commendation of Secretary of the Navy Forrestal yesterday for his 40-year "contributions to the growth of the Navy."



Brooks

Forrestal's letter of commendation was read to Brooks, who is head of the Mechanical Section, Specification Division, Bureau of Yards and Docks, by Rear Admiral J. J. Manning, chief of the bureau, in the admiral's office. Bureau officials attended.

Admiral Manning also spoke of Brooks' "patience and kindness" to him when the admiral, then a junior officer, received his first assignment at the bureau. Brooks, who declared he has enjoyed his work as an engineer, has no intention of retiring.

Brooks received his Ph. B. degree from Brown University in 1901, and later studied engineering at the University of Pennsylvania and at George Washington University.

British Ask Kremlin For Views on Atom

Unprecedented Move Aimed at Breaking East-West Stalemate Over Problem

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Great Britain appealed to the Kremlin today for a clarification of Russia's views on world atomic energy control.

In an unprecedented maneuver aimed at breaking the East-West stalemate over the atomic problem, Britain asked the Soviet government to shed more light on its stand concerning such questions as "the atomic veto," the scope and powers of global atomic inspection and the need for destroying stockpiles of atomic bombs.

British U.N. Delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan submitted the questions to Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko with a request that his government provide the answers.

To Submit Answers

Gromyko told U.N. Atomic Energy Commission members that the Soviet delegation would "consider them thoroughly and submit our answers."

Gromyko did not make clear, however, whether that meant the questionnaire would be sent to his superiors in the Kremlin or answered here.

A summary of the Russian proposals and the questions Britain wants answered follows:

1. Russian international control should be established in a special convention of treaty concluded "in accordance with the convention on the prohibition of atomic weapons."

Britain: Does this mean Russia still insists that all A-bombs must be scrapped and production of them halted before control machinery is agreed upon? Will Russia modify its position enough to say that the treaty on prohibition would go into force only after the second treaty on control—is implemented?

2. Russia: The International Atomic Control Commission shall "periodically carry out inspection" of atomic mines and plants.

Britain: What is meant by periodic inspection? Does it mean special cases only and rule out continuous inspection in the general field of atomic energy?

3. Russia: The commission shall follow rules of technical exploitation of atomic facilities.

Special Probes Urged

4. Russia: The commission shall conduct "special investigations" when suspicious of atomic violations.

Britain: Under what circumstances would they be carried out, what would be reasonable ground for suspicion?

5. Russia: The commission will request from governments data on atomic facilities.

Britain: Will inspectors be allowed to visit only plants whose existence has been made known by governments concerned?

6. Russia: The commission makes "recommendations" to governments on questions of atomic production, stockpiling and their use.

7. Russia: The commission shall have its own inspectorial apparatus.

Britain: Does this mean the employment of the agency's own inspectors answerable only to the atomic agency and with the right to enter each country?

8. Russia: The commission makes "recommendations" to the Security Council for prevention and suppression of atomic violations.

Britain: Does this mean all steps for punishment of atomic violations will be subject to the big power veto in the Security Council? Or does Russia agree that at least minor violations may be dealt with in the atomic commission itself, where the veto would not apply?

And there were two general questions about the Soviet proposals as a whole:

Con the Soviet proposals be interpreted as providing for any forms of atomic control other than international inspection?

Can the Soviet proposals be interpreted as allowing any further consideration of such controls as supervision, management or licensing of atomic operations and atomic facilities, as advocated by experts of 10 of the 12 nations on the Atomic Energy Commission?

American and French delegates joined British Deputy Delegate Richard Miles in opening todoy's atomic meeting with pleas for clarification of the Russian position.

Egypt Charge Denied

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 11 (U.P.). Egypt warned the United Nations Security Council today that Britain's continued presence in the Nile Valley threatened the peace of the entire Middle Ease and Britain replied that Egypt's charges were "unjust and inaccurate."

Sir Alexander Cadogan, arguing Britain's case, reiterated that British troops were in Egypt under terms of a valid treaty signed in 1936. As for Egyptian claims on the Sudan, he said, "The political unity of the Nile Valley is a myth."

Egypt took the position that Britain's presence in the Nile Valley was likely to cause serious trouble at any time.

Army Drops Royal Gem Case

Berlin, Aug. 11 (AP).—The United States Army announced tonight it was dropping its investigation of the missing royal jewels of the late Princess Hermine, widow of Germany's last Kaiser, and had canceled technical charges under which it was holding a handsome fraulein in connection with the case.

O. R. Cariucci, head of the Army's Criminal Investigation Division, said, "We have definitely determined that no American is involved in the disappearance of the jewels and, therefore, we have no responsibility for pursuing the case any further."

The decision cleared Vera Herbst, 39, long-time friend of Hermine's son, Prince Ferdinand von Schoenaich-Carolath. The Prince set off the spectacular investigation by reporting 29 pieces of jewelry were missing from a rich collection which Fraulein Herbst had brought him from his mother's home in the Soviet occupation zone two months ago.

Carilucci had said previously he was not certain that Princess Hermine had died of natural causes, but disclosed he had received a doctor's report saying the Kaiser's widow died of a heart ailment at her home in Frankfurt on the Oder last Thursday. He has asked the Russians to conduct an autopsy.

"Even if foul play eventually is established," Cariuoci said tonight, "it still is a matter involving only Germans and for them to clear up."

Va. Right of Way Costs Up

Richmond, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—A. H. Pettigrew, right-of-way engineer for the State highway department, reportd today that right-of-way costs for the department for the fiscal year ended June 30 totaled $1,394,459, an increase of 80 per cent over the figure for the previous year.

U. S. Officials Ready to Fly Down to Rio

By the United Press

Assistant Secretary of State Norman Armour and a vanguard of American officials and technical advisers were to leave for Rio de Janeiro last night to help draft a permanent inter-American defense treaty.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, chief of the American delegation, plans to leave by plane at 9 a. m. tomorrow. He will be accompanied by Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Warren P. Austin, U. S. delegate to theUn-Security Council. Secretary Marshall conferred with President Truman for about half an hour yesterday.

The conference, opening Friday, will be attended by representatives of 20 American Republics.

Its primary objective is to write a permanent treaty incorporating the wartime Inter-American defense agreement known as the 'Act of Chapultepec" under which all the Americas pledged themselves to come to the aid of any Western Hemisphere nation which is attacked.

Focus on Argentina

Since Argentina was not invited to the Mexico City conference, at which the agreement was signed, Inter-American attention will be focused on diplomatic jockeying between this country and Argentia.

They will be meeting across the Pan-American conference table for the first time in five years.

Argentina was excluded from Mexico City because of refusal to join the Allied war effort against the Axis nations until just before V-J Day.

A high spot of the conference will be President Truman's visit late this month or early in September.

Armour was to be accompanied by William Dawson, United States Ambassador to the Pan American Union's governing board; Stanley Woodward, chief of State Department protocol; John C. Drier, chief of the Department's division of special inter-American affairs, and Press Officer Michael J. McDermott, Marshall's press chief.

A converted B-29 Army Bomber took off for Rio from Andrews Field yesterday afternoon. It carried Lieut. Gen. Matthew A. Ridgway, Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland and Rear Admiral Marshall Greer, all members of the inter-American defense board.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.), ranking Democrats on the Senate and House Foreign Relations Committees, left by ship last week.

France Agrees Conditionally To Ruhr Boost

Paris, Aug. 11.—France is willing to see an increase in the German industrial output, provided such production does not penalize French industry or undermine her security, an official spokesman said today in announcing that Foreign Minister Georges Bidault had accepted with "satisfaction" the American invitation to a three-power conference on Germany.

The diplomatic spokesman added that it was not yet clear from Secretary of State George C. Marshall's invitation whether there would be one conference to discuss production and the management both increasing Germany's level of and control of the Ruhr coal mines or two conferences, one for each topic. But the French government assumed, the spokesman said, that there would be one meeting.

On the question of raising Germany's steel production from the 5,800,000-ton level (7,500,000-ton capacity) fixed by Big Four representatives in March, 1946, the French spokesman said Bidault's views were known. They were that France does not oppose a change if other questions are considered and answers given at the same time.

One French question would be obviously the future of the Lorraine steel industry and its rights to coke. Before the war, the Lorraine mills had to depend mainly on Ruhr coke and the French government's stand now is that enemy industry cannot be allowed to prosper while Allied industry is penalized.

On the "technical," three-power question of management and control of Ruhr coal mines, the spokesman forecast that Franch surely would present her view that the German industrial basin must be placed under international control. The United States and Britain are known to oppose such a move on the ground that it would give Russia a strong position in Western Europe.

Fourth Proposal Rejected

Berlin, Aug. 11 (AP).—British and American representatives on the Allied Control Council today rejected for the present a French proposal for additional lists of German peacetime plants for reparations.

Only three weeks ago, the Anglo-American council members similarly opposed a Russian proposal for the immediate allocation of 13 million tons of German steel capacity in the western zones as reparations. The Russians claimed it was "excess."

Southeast Group Rallies to Support Of Captain James

Rallying to the support of Fire Capt. William V. James, members of the Southeast Businessmen's Association last night passed a resolution commending his services and appointed a committee "to investigate morale conditions within the fire department."

Named to head the investigative committee was Dr. David T. Gates, chairman. Other committee members included Aubrey Lee and Arthur Shaffer. Captain James, commanding officer of No. 18 Engine House, is under trial board hearing. Charges stemmed from an explosion and injury to four firemen while cleaning fire apparatus July 17.

The businessmen, in regular session last night at 314 Pennsylvania ave. se., also indorsed unanimously a minority report of the Citizens Community Chest Survey Committee signed by representatives of the federations of citizens and businessmen's associations. The report recommended drastic changes in operation of the Community Chest, including dropping of support of many of its present member agencies.

American to Wed Daughter of Envoy Kurusu

Tokyo, Aug. 11 (U.P.).— Aformer American Army officer, Frank K. White, disclosed today that he plans to marry Pia Kurusu, daughter of Saburu Kurusu, the Japanese envoy who was at the White House to talk peace when the Japanese hit Pearl Harbor.

White, a first lieutenant during the war, is now a civilian attached to the reparations section of Allied Headquarters.

He said he and the 21-year-old Pia will be married Thursday at the United States consulate in Yokohama.

Relatives Uninformed

"I plan to take Pia to the United States—but not just now," White said.

"I don't know how people in the United States feel about these things. I've been away two years."

White said he had not informed his relatives in Somerset, Pa.

Mother Is American

Pia's mother is an American-born white woman whom Kurusu wed while he was Japanese consul-general in Chicago.

Pia was described as having black, silken hair, a light complexion and vivacious charm, but not American-type beauty. She speaks English and French as well as Japanese. At various times, she has worked as secretary for her father, who always insisted he did not know Pearl Harbor was planned. He furnished information to American authorities prosecuting Japanese war criminals.

Moslem India Hands Reins To Ali Jinnah

Karachi, India, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Pakistan Constituent Assembly elected Mahomed Ali Jinnah as its president today and heard from him a plea that the lawmakers "forget the past and bury the hatchet" to achieve peace and prosperity.

Jinnah

As governor-general of Pakistan and president of the Assembly, the Moslem League president will have control over the projected Moslem Indian Dominion and the framing of its constitution.

Jinnah pledged he would administer his office "fairly and impartially." He said Pakistan would be a state with no discrimination against anyone, starting with the "fundamental principle that all citizens are equal."

He said the first duty of all citizens was to maintain law and order and to "protect life, property, and religious rights of all at any cost." He expressed hope the Assembly would take "adequate measures to eliminate crime and corruption."

He called for the stamping out of black market activity and protection of the citizens in the present time of "distressed conditions, with shortage of food and essential commodities."

Liaquat Ali Khan, Moslem League party leader in the Assembly, in a speech addressed to Jinnah, said "achievement of this day of Pakistan is mainly, if not entirely, due to you. It is unparallele in the history of the world that without bloodshed or civil war the fifth largest nation in the world has come into existence."

Kiran Shanker Roy, leader of the Congress Party in the Assembly, said, "We accept the citizenship of Pakistan and will share all difficulties and risks, as we hope to share its prosperity."

Marshall Congratulatory

The Pakistan flag will be three quarters green with a star and crescent superimposed on it, and one quarter white, representing the non-Moslem mmorities.

Among congratulatory messages read to the Assembly was one from United States Secretary of State Marshall.

"We hope this aptitude may be utilized in a wider sphere and that jointly with other friendly nations of the world we may strive to establish a new age of freedom, justice and peace for humanity."

Mrs. Pandit will officially open diplomatic relations between the two nations August 15 when India (Hindustan) becomes a dominion in the British Commonwealth.

Police Intimidation

No one is in a better position than Washington lawyers to insist on strict respect for civil rights by members of the District Police Department. It is cheering, therefore, that the detention and beating of Julius W. Clegg which has been recounted in this newspaper is serving as a peg for the Civil Rights Committee of the District Bar Association to renew its efforts in this direction. The Bar Association has done some memorable work in the past in focusing attention on abuses in holding prisoners for "investigation" without specific charges. The brutality revealed in the Clegg case emphasizes that a lot remains to be done, especially in investigation of third-degree methods resorted to in specific violation of the guarantees of the law. There have been too many intimations of physical violence by police, allegedly resulting even in death, for the Clegg case to be regarded merely as an isolated instance. A particularly ugly implication of the current disclosures is that Negroes do not receive equal treatment at the hands of the police—a fear which, as Eric Sevareid brought out recently in a letter to The Washington Post, is substantial among our colored citizens. We hope that the Bar Association will mince no words in making its position known, for censure from this source can be a potent weapon in forcing police to abide by the niceties of the law. Just incidentally, neither The Washington Post nor its employes will be dissuaded by anonymous telephone threats from reporting the facts in this disgraceful situation.

The Ruhr

What carrot-and-stick treatment shall be applied to the Ruhr in order to get more coal out of it will be the subject of the British-American conference that will open in Washington today. The facts about the Ruhr have been catalogued over and over again. Europe's revival depends upon coal, and the Ruhr is the greatest of its coal-producing regions. In peacetime the normal daily output was 400,000 tons, which war production pushed up, with the help of 60 per cent slave labor, to 420,000 tons. Bombing had no effect on Ruhr production, believe it or not, till October 1944, and then only slightly. It is asserted that the means for producing only 30,000 tons a day were wiped out and the means of producing much less than that figure were in part disabled. This was the situation that the British took over after VE-Day. They aimed at a target of 300,000 tons a day, but got stuck for month after dreary month at 180,000 tons; now output has climbed to 230,000 tons, or just over 50 per cent of the prewar sum. The explanation of the low output is the work inefficiency of the German miners.

Thus the problem of increasing the output of coal is a problem of encouraging the German miner. The British seem inclined to the belief that if the mines were nationalized, or socialized, more production would come almost automatically. It is on this theory that the British have lately been running their own economy. To be sure, the Germans want to know where they stand, but in this matter inter-Allied indecision requires a postponement of the Ruhr's political future. Moreover, in the dictionary of the Marshall Plan, the new word for Europe should be integration, or continentalization; not nationalization, which has become the flowering of fragmented sovereignties which are condemning all Europe to life in a poorhouse. That is the tack that the American delegates may be expected to take. If the present situation is regarded as an emergency, then there ought to be a renovated management of the Ruhr, preferably through the establishment of a Ruhr Coal Authority (including Germans) and a coal director of known qualifications operating under it.

Incentives, of course, must be furnished the miners to produce more coal. At present they are getting good rations, amounting, it is said, to 4,000 calories. That is to say, they are probably eating better than the British miners. But the special ration applies only to the miner himself, and cases are frequent of the miners saving their rations for their starving families. The German miner is also worse off than other miners in Europe in that he has no amenities to enjoy in his off-hours. Consumer goods, movies, and so on must be among the incentives in the Ruhr. Finally, so much treading water has been done since VE-Day that all the paraphernalia of coal mining is in a state of dilapidation. This applies particularly to transport. We cannot expect much from the British in their present distress beyond the delegation of authority. The primary job is American, and it should be tackled without further delay, for the next winter at the present snail's pace is likely to be the real winter of Europe's discontent, with the possibility that the poorhouse might also become a madhouse.

War Crimes Code

It is good news that the United Nations General Assembly will take up the problem of giving more lasting and authoritative form to the principles underlying the Nuernberg war-crimes trial. Some of the most thoughtful and experienced American jurists urged at the conclusion of the famous trial that a convention in clear and specific terms should authorize the punishment of any enemy of mankind who may plot and carry out a war of aggression in the future. We repeatedly advanced that view. More recently a committee on the development of international law recommended that the General Assembly set up an international law commission and instruct it to formulate a war-crimes code in harmony with the Nuernberg pattern. In our opinion, that would be the most effective preliminary step that could be taken toward establishing the Nuernberg principles as world law.

There are many who take the view that the principles laid down in connection with the famous war trial have already become a part of international law. In a sense that is true, for international law is nothing more than the accepted practices, customs and agreements of the world community. American theory and practice clearly recognize the growth of the law from case to case. We place a heavy reliance upon the common law which unfolds in this manner. Yet we also recognize that common law is inferior to statutory law, and the advantage of having on the books an unmistakable treaty or convention providing for the punishment of any future instigator of aggressive war seems to us to be substantial.

In our own case, for example, the United States could readily withdraw from adherence to the principles invoked at Nuernberg by an international military tribunal. No treaty binds us. In a matter of such great importance surely the peace-loving nations should work out, through the U. N., a specific and binding war-crimes code that could be enforced as a matter of course—providing the war criminals were captured—in the event of another war of aggression. Nuernberg has provided the precedent, but a precedent is less compelling than a law or a treaty. We think that the principle involved is too vital to be left to the hit-or-miss development of international common law.

All Chorus And No Plot

The anticlimax in which the Hughes hearing wound up yesterday is resounding. Senator Brewster, who is chairman of the War Investigating Committee under whose auspices the investigation is being held, has retired for a couple of weeks to the backwoods of Maine. Seemingly Senator Ferguson, chairman of the subcommittee before which the inquiry is being conducted felt he had been left in a box. That, at any rate, was the fruit of the Michigander's bathtub ruminations on his dilemma. For yesterday morning he called the whole thing off. Another day like Saturday, and Mr. Howard Hughes would have become a national hero. Formally the proceedings have been postponed till November 17 on the grounds that the presence of Mr. Johnny Meyer is essential to the proceedings. This was a palpably absurd excuse. All that Johnny Meyer knows is on the expense accounts which are now in the committee's possession. The performance has thus been left dangling in the air, with the reputations of all manner of persons in a slightly damaged condition. No dignity, however, has been sullied more than that of Congress.

The original object of investigation, you may remember, was the contract awarded in 1942 to the Messrs. Howard Hughes and Henry Kaiser for a tremendous flying boat which has not yet been delivered, and may never be. Mr. Kaiser appeared as a witness and apparently explained his retirement from the project to the apparent satisfaction of the committee. Mr. Hughes confused and complicated the whole issue by making charges that the whole investigation had been inspired by his refusal to consent to a merger of his Trans-World Air Lines and the Pan American Airways in a proposed monopoly of overseas commercial air operations, so that Senator Brewster's relationship with the proponents of this monopoly necessarily became an equally violent subject of public excitement. Then the committee permitted itself to be diverted from the question of the flying boat by General Echols' assertion that a contract for a photo-reconnaissance plane had been awarded to Mr. Hughes on the recommendation of Mr. Elliott Roosevelt over the protests of certain Air Force officials. Obviously the committee allowed itself to be dazzled by the possible political implications of this revelation; especially after Mr. Hughes' publicity representative, Mr. Johnny Meyer, testified that he had spent several thousands of dollars in supplying Mr. Roosevelt and his friends with entertainment and other luxuries at the time when he was supposed to be examining in the light of his own experience in photo-reconnaissance operations the practical virtues of Mr. Hughes' designs.

The committee, however, merely succeeded in proving that Mr. Roosevelt in accepting Mr. Meyer's hospitality had acted with great indiscretion and impropriety, which was scarcely a matter of great surprise. It did not succeed in showing that Mr. Meyer's hospitalities had influenced Mr. Roosevelt's technical judgments, for in the nature of things it was impossible to do more than to point the suspicion. Mr. Roosevelt, therefore, emerged from his hearing with an aura of vindicated innocence, and as one who had foiled a set of persecutors animated by cynical self-interest or partisan malice. The question of Mr. Roosevelt's technical abilities was not even raised. Yet, in view of General Echols' testimony it should have been made the nub of the whole matter. For if it could have been shown that it was any less than that of the officers who had opposed his recommendation, it would have opened the question why he was assigned to such a responsibility in the first place and why his report was approved.

When Mr. Hughes finally appeared before the committee he immediately took the offensive by repeating his accusations against Senator Brewster. By this time the whole investigation had got out of hand, and there was no doubt that the discomfiture of the committee was being thoroughly enjoyed by all those who had reason to resent the often cavalier methods used by members of congressional committees in dealing with witnesses less influential and resourceful than Mr. Hughes and less delighted by the public spotlight than Mr. Elliott Roosevelt. The complete absence of any rules of procedure, or any clear definition of what constitutes evidence, which has made possible so much brow-beating and other abuses of power by congressional inquisitors, had this time been adroitly turned against them.

The farcical character assumed by the Senatorial investigation brings up again various questions concerning the propriety and wisdom of the methods by which these investigations are conducted. That there was something very wrong with the conduct of the present investigation was apparent from the fact that the legislative value of the evidence so far uncovered is virtually nil, and that the hearings had been permitted to degenerate into an extremely bad-mannered and ill-tempered controversy which was being decided in the public mind, not according to relevant facts, but by political passions and personal prejudices.

The courts have long since agreed that Congress has the constitutional right to inquire into any matter that might conceivably aid it in the framing of legislation. And this is broad enough to give it unlimited powers of interrogation. Since neither the device of minority representation nor the assumption of a sense of justice and fair play on the part of the investigators can always be trusted to protect the witnesses, it has sometimes been proposed that these investigations follow rules of procedure and evidence comparable to those of courts. If this entails, as perhaps it may, too great a limitation on the right of inquiry, it is at least reasonable to ask that these interrogations be conducted with some definite legislative end in view, and thereby give direction to the examinations.

This, as it seems to us, could be achieved by vesting the inquisitorial power wholly with those committees which also have a legislative function, and by abolishing all special committees, precisely as was provided in the original version of the LaFollette-Monroney reorganization bill—a reform which this hearing has made a "must" for the next Congress, if only by way of protecting the dignity of our representative institutions.

Around The World

To people becoming almost blase over the repeated marvels of air travel, perhaps the most dramatic part of William P. Odom's around-the-world solo flight was his narrow escape when he fell asleep. Human endurance obviously has not kept pace with the mechanical advances which enable man to conquer space at the rate of 19,645 miles in a mere three days. It is interesting to note that Mr. Odom included a wide sweep in his course to avoid the Soviet Union. This increased his mileage some 25 per cent over that of Wiley Post when the latter first blazed the solo trail 14 years ago. If Mr. Odom could have passed over Russia, very probably his elapsed time would have been reduced substantially.

Undoubtedly a zest for adventure and a sense of pioneering were among the principal motives which spurred Mr. Odom on his journey. Quite apart from its more newsworthy features, however, the flight serves to demonstrate several important truths. One is that, even in an age when further speed seems academic, it is foolish to impose mental limitations on the frontiers of ingenuity. It is a scant 75 years, for instance, since Jules Verne was regarded as the apostle of futurism, not to say a crackpot, when he wrote Around the World in 80 Days; yet Mr. Odom circled the globe in less than 80 hours.

The second by-product is to lay additional emphasis on the sobering fact that, whatever the sovereign difference among the nations, the world is becoming a unit through the revolution in communications. That is now commonplace, but a commonplace has been defined as a truth that bears repetition over and over again. This particular truth has implications we can never afford to forget, both for our own defense and the larger goal of world peace. Although the nations may be miles and even centuries apart in political ideology and development, their points of potential accommodation or conflict are now only hours away.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Elliott's Job

In connection with the Hughes investigation, it appears to me that the sixty-four dollar question is: Why was Elliott Roosevelt given the superlatively responsible task of choosing the reconnaissance plane for the Army Air Forces?

It is a matter of common knowledge that Elliott had but recently joined the AAF. True, he began his career as a captain and was given rapid advancement and plushy jobs. However, when it came to a task as vital as the selection of a plane on which victory perhaps depended, one would think that even paternal ambition might have yielded to sane judgment and the appointment of any one of many regular AAF officers who had spent their careers since World War I studying photo reconnaissance.

What chance would the commanding general, Army Air Forces have to get whom he wanted for a job, if the Commander in Chief wanted his own son?

Gen. Hughes' Order

Jerry Kluttz, writing in your issue of August 7, takes a crack at Maj. Gen. E. S. Hughes, Chief of Ordnance. He recommends that the general take a course in human relations. I submit that there could be no better dean of a school in human relations than General Hughes.

Mr. Kluttz refers to a memorandum written by the general addressed to employes of the Ordnance Department in which he deals with absences of personnel from their desks especially when they visit Pentagon beverage bars.

Mr. Kluttz evidently does not know General Hughes. Tall, stern of mien and almost forbidding in appearance, he is the softest hearted general I have ever met, with a bark far worse than the bite.

During the late war, though not a member of his command, I had frequent occasion to appeal to General Hughes to intercede in cases involving apparent personnel injustice. His immediate response was always full of the sarcasm of which Mr. Kluttz writes. But the injustice was always righted.

Enlisted men respected the general and were devoted to him. No one who knew him was ever deceived by his gruff manner; they knew he was covering up a kindliness that was almost tender.

I am sure his memorandum has not fooled even one of his employes. If some have stayed away from desk and duty too long, the memorandum will give them a chuckle; but they'll play ball and the Government will get better service.

Theater Color Bar

Your August 8 story "District Theaters' Color Bar Brings Ban From 37 Producers" prompts me to write this note.

On August 8, my husband and I attended a performance of Leatrice Joy in the "Vinegar Tree" at the summer theater at Olney, Md. In the audience that night I noticed three Negro patrons. The remainder of the audience was largely made up of white Washington patrons (at least the majority of cars bore District tags). There was a full house, but among the crowd I saw no pointing, no demand for refunds, no leaving of the theater because it had "permitted" these quiet, appreciative Negroes to attend.

It seems to me that the ban in Washington is certainly cutting off theater operators' noses to spite their faces. If Washington audiences will drive 20 miles to see a show which has no such ban, they will surely be willing to attend downtown shows with the ban removed. ANNA M. MARCUS.

"City Slicker"

I have just read your "City Slicker" editorial of August 7, and I am delighted that your paper published it.

Some Senators and Congressmen have been doing this for a long time. They also are on all preferred lists at apartments and get lower rent than poor struggling commanders in the Navy have to pay.

I am paying $185 monthly for a small house in Georgetown, unfurnished, have two school-age children and am completely disgusted. At the one fashionable apartment, I was told the waiting time is two years.

Senator O'Daniel's contribution is for his purse only—$10,000 to $13,000 in a cooperative apartment where everyone must assume the expenses is a nice sum for him. The housing shortage will never ease or be helped as long as the Congressmen and Senators have the choice of low rentals (Westchester, Sedgwick Gardens, etc.) and the opportunity of kicking people out of homes as Senator O'Daniel did. Noninterference

Reference to your article of August 7 (on American arms flowing to Latin America) it is fitting to make clear that it is not true that Dominican government has aided Venezuelan Rightists or that their bases of operations are probably located in this country.

Following the coup d'etat by Communist Betancourt, Gen. Lopez Contreras and prominent Venezuelan exiles visited the Dominican Republic and tried to settle there. President Trujillo, unwilling to intervene in the internal affairs of other countries, rejected their plans. The Dominican Republic, living up to standards of international law, does not under any circumstances become involved in the internal affairs of any country. LOGRONO.

"Conscience Cases"

I read with great interest the editorial on amnesty for conscientious objectors and Jehovah's Witnesses which appeared in The Washington Post on August 4 and wish to compliment you upon its dispassionate tone.

May I say a word, however, about these violators of the Selective Service Act whom the editorial calls "draft dodgers"? With due regard for the caliber of the President's Amnesty Board, our committee feels that conscience in this situation in such a complex matter as to be above the scrutiny of Justice Roberts and his colleagues. Certainly the records of the Selective Service System and Department of Justice, containing information which Selective Service violators have never been permitted to see, much less to refute, are a most inadequate basis for determining whether a man was sincere or insincere and hence deserving or undeserving of executive clemency.

Many Selective Service cases are down in the books as "draft dodgers" merely because they lacked the education and social background necessary to impress draft boards and FBI agents that they were conscientious in their refusal to comply with the wartime conscription program at some point. In fact, they may never have even heard of the term "conscientious objector."

One large group of alleged evaders consists of thousands of Negroes from underprivileged areas in the cities of the North and depressed sections of the South. They made up 18.8 per cent of Selective Service cases received by the Bureau of Prisons from the courts in the representative fiscal year 1945, whereas Negroes form only 9.7 per cent of the population of the country at large. There presence in prison in disproportionate numbers results from their status as second-class citizens on the outside.

Another significant factor in their cases was the absence of all-Negro or racially mixed draft boards in the South. One cannot blame them for so often standing mute before their boards or in court. Certainly they would not have been dealt with less severely if they had explained that they took their stand chiefly in opposition to racial segregation and discrimination in the armed forces.

So the question of "draft dodgers" is not as simple as it seems on the surface. After long and careful study, the Committee for Amnesty has come to the conclusion that only an amnesty for all Selective Service violators will avoid miscarriages of justice in cases like those of the opponent of British imperialism and the Negro offenders mentioned above.

A year ago, on August 14, 1946, the Canadian government put into effect what amounted to an amnesty for absentees and deserters from the army, navy and air forces in Canada. Is the United States Government so fearful of its security almost two years after the end of the shooting war and more than four months after the expiration of the Selective Service Act that it cannot declare an amnesty here?

Now at the Danbury, Conn., prison is Thomas J. Leonard, one of the conscientious objectors who broke with the Civilian Public Service camp system over conditions which, as the August 4 editorial put it, "goaded them to violation." He has been on an amnesty hunger strike since April 18. How much longer must he continue to suffer for his religious convictions regarding war and conscription?

I should like to offer one additional thought. The editorial speaks of an amnesty as if it were a measure which could be applied to only a fraction of the 16,000 persons convicted of Selective Service offenses. By definition, though, an amnesty is a general pardon covering an entire category of persons. The Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences, for instance, states that in this country "the term amnesty is generally employed in pardons extending to whole classes and communities instead of to individuals." It is, therefore, not arrived at through an individual sifting process of the kind now being attempted by the President's board. We believe that the board should act in accordance with the accepted definition of the word amnesty.

Washington Calling

Showdown With Russia

IF THE average citizen still has any faith in the United Nations, it is because hope dies hard in the human breast. People cannot bring themselves to believe the only end is another war that will this time bring destruction to our own shores.

In recent months the feeling has grown, and particularly in Congress, that a showdown on the United Nations is long overdue.

Influential men have been saying that the United States should call for an end to the U. N. veto. Some have said the same thing publicly.

They believe the moment has come to decide whether the U. N. is to be anything more than a sparring ring. If the Russians refuse to surrender the veto, then they will have no choice but to resign and a U. N. with new and far broader powers can begin to function.

But our Government has another obligation before this happens. That is to make an honest effort to determine what are Russia's security requirements. We could put the question almost as bluntly as this: "You talk about security. All right, what is it you require for security?"

Something like this proposal was made the other day by Senator Brien McMahon in a speech at Fordham University which got too little attention. Senator McMahon suggested that Secretary Marshall's proposal for a European inventory of economic needs be supplemented with a proposal for a world inventory of security needs.

THROUGH THE U. N. we would ask each member nation to state "from the vantage point of its own security" what it considers to be the requirements of a workable peace. If such an inventory could be obtained on a basis of frankness and honesty, it would go a long way toward relieving the fears and suspicions that today ride both rulers and peoples in large areas of the world.

There is another possibility which should not be ruled out. That is the possibility of a meeting at the highest level—a meeting between Stalin and Truman. The odds are a thousand to one against such a meeting; and the chances of anything coming of it, if it should occur, are almost as remote. Yet when the prospect is for another and more destructive war, nothing must be left undone.

Stalin and Truman have talked together only once. That was at Potsdam two years ago. The President had only a short time before come into his high office. The background of the previous Stalin-Roosevelt conferences was new to him. He felt himself bound by the commitments his predecessor had made.

In any meeting today, all that would be changed. The President would be acting in the light of his own policy of the past two years. He would no longer be a proxy for another man's will. In a face to face conversation he could make it unmistakably clear that our policy is not bluff but sober determination.

THE OBLIGATION falls on us more heavily than it does on the Soviet Union to press unceasingly against the barrier of suspicion and fear. In many ways, Americans, both official and unofficial, have done just that.

Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith sent a now famous document to Foreign Minister Molotov some time ago. It listed 30 attempts by the American Government to promote a better understandng between the two nations. Among them were proposals for an exchange of professors, for exchanging groups of artists and actors, for relaxation of the barriers to the free movement of ideas. In each of those 30 instances the Russians said no.

A few private citizens have managed to get into Russia since the war. It has taken months of patient effort to obtain the desired visa from Moscow. One was Prof. Percy E. Corbett of Yale University, who went with the expressed desire of expanding the field of knowledge between the two countries. The sober, factual account of his experience, prepared for the Yale Institute of International Studies, is a record of rebuff and frustration far more revealing than tons of anti-Russian fulmination from professional Soviet haters.

It is too easy to admit defeat before the door that Moscow has so often slammed. The only alternative to defeat is unremitting pressure that explores every avenue of hope, both through the U. N. and otherwise.

Police Brutality

Let me among many of your subscribers express shock and horror at the treatment suffered by Julius Clegg.

I have loved Washington since I first saw it nine years ago, and have always felt privileged to live in the Nation's Capital. All of us who feel the same, are, I am sure, 100 per cent behind The Washington Post's drive to restore law and order to the Police Department and afford equal protection to all citizens regardless of color or creed. VIRGINIA J. BERRY.

Congratulations on your continued efforts to expose the evils of the District of Columbia Police Department. I refer to the article regarding Julius Clegg. It is very gratifying to note that because the victim in this case was one of a minority and oft abused group you did not see fit to neglect the exposure.

Threat To Peace

By Sumner Welles

Terrorism In Palestine

THE MURDER by the Irgun Zvai Leumi terrorists of two British sergeants they had seized as hostages has done infinite harm to Zionism. It has embittered a host of former sympathizers. It was as repulsive an act as Hitler's slaughter of the hostages he took during the war. The Jewish Agency is guilty of no exaggeration when it warns the leaders of the Jewish community in Palestine that the extirpation of terrorism is "an inescapable national necessity."

Yet even in its righteous indignation public opinion must not forget the real origins of this crime. It must remember that injustice and inhumanity breed injustice and inhumanity. The butchery of these hostages was an act of retaliation for the judicial murder by the British authorities of three young Jews who had helped some of their fellow-conspirators to escape from Acre Prison last May. These three men may have been misguided, but according to their own lights they were only fighting for Jewish freedom. Their death at British hands at the very moment when the United Nations Commission for Palestine is seeking a final solution for the Palestine problem is a lasting blot on the record of British injustice.

THERE IS nothing to be gained by mincing words. The British military administration in Palestine is shot through from top to bottom with anti-Semitism. The British forces of occupation, now numbering 100,000 men, have been presumably sent to Palestine to keep the peace between Jews and Arabs. They are there as the agents of a mandatory power charged with the duty of insuring the safety of the peoples temporarily entrusted to its care as wards.

But the plain truth is that that great majority of the Jews in Palestine who are wholly innocent of the acts of terrorism committed by a handful of fanatics, and who are trying to prevent the repetition of such acts, are not only deprived of every semblance of their legitimate rights, but are also being treated as outcasts by the very authorities who are supposed to be acting as their trustees.

The Rubowitz case provides a shocking illustration of existing conditions. The British police force in Palestine has a notorious "strong arm squad." Last spring a 16-year-old boy named Alexander Rubowitz was kidnaped by members of this squad, headed by a Major Farran, taken down the deserted Jericho road, and tortured. He died on the spot. The officers responsible were advised to flee to Syria. Due to unexpected publicity, Major Farran was compelled to return to Jerusalem, was identified by eyewitnesses, was imprisoned, was helped by his fellow officers again to escape, and subsequently, because of further publicity, surrendered once more. His accomplices are generally believed to be back on duty in Jerusalem.

WHEN WE KNOW that the authorities charged with the protection of the inhabitants of Palestine are guilty of such atrocities, and learn of the gross miscarriages of justice that have taken place in the case of the individual officials responsible, it is easier for us to understand why such acts of retaliation as the murder of the British sergeants have been perpetrated.

If the United Nations permits the continuation of this vicious circle in Palestine, a major catastrophe will be inevitable. Only a few days ago what was nothing more nor less than a pogrom took place in the streets of the Jewish city of Tel-Aviv, when British troops deliberately shot down unarmed men and women in reprisal for the murder of the two sergeants. Human passions are mounting to a pitch where they will soon be out of control.

But these dangers, grave as they are, are by no means the most serious of the consequences to be anticipated. Anti-Jewish riots are already spreading rapidly throughout the British Isles. Jewish demonstrations against Great Britain are increasing here at home. Unless the tragedy of Palestine is quickly ended, the hatreds now arising will stimulate the growth of that loathsome blight of anti-Semitism in several countries which have so far prided themselves upon their freedom from racial antagonisms.

AT ITS session next month, the Assembly of the United Nations will receive the report of its Commission on Palestine. We must hope that the action taken by the Assembly on this report will provide a just and final solution.

However often Mr. Bevin may deny the self-evident truth, the evils resulting from present-day conditions in Palestine are a threat to world peace. They are engendering international friction and ill will. They are jeopardizing friendly cooperation between the Western Powers. Neither the Assembly nor the Security Council can afford to ignore the fact that their obligations under Articles 11 and 39 of the United Nations Charter will not be met unless some way is promptly found to terminate the British mandate and to replace the British forces now in Palestine with some truly impartial peace enforcement agency.

Bramuglia's Note To Marshall

IT IS MORE than a little ironic to have Gen. Juan D. Peron pose as the champion of justice, international cooperation and world peace.

NOVER

When the United States and the overwhelming majority of the other nations of the New World were joined together in a death struggle against the Nazi, Fascist and Japanese aggressers, Argentina remained aloof. No dictates of abstract justice, no promptings of hemisphere solidarity moved her then.

The totalitarian-minded leaders of Argentina, among whom Peron was a prominent figure long before he became president, were determined that their country would sit out the war and pursue, so far as possible, a policy of "business as usual" with the Nazis and Fascists.

They showed no disposition to carry out the pledges assumed by all the American republics at the Rio conference of 1942. They manifested no haste in living up to the terms of the Act of Chapultepec of 1945. It was only very recently that the last tardy measures were taken by the Buenos Aires government to comply with its pledges.

In the meantime, democratic rights in Argentina have been trampled upon by Peron in the months since he assumed power there.

All this has not prevented Peron from assuming at this hour the role of an apostle of peace in this hemisphere and in the world.

IN LINE WITH Peron's new and surprising role, the Argentine Foreign Minister, Juan Atilie Bramuglia, recently addressed a letter to Secretary of State Marshall which the latter has now answered.

If the profession of noble motives and high aims could bring about international peace and a just world order the Bramuglia missive could be hailed as a great document.

It is shot through with concern for the plight of mankind. It urges a course which, if followed, would undoubtedly bring peace nearer at a time when, in actuality, peace is further away than ever. No one can argue with its premises or conclusions.

Certainly, it would be a boon if, as Bramulgia suggests, the peoples and governments of the world "work for internal and international pacification," if they "respect the rights inherent to the human personality"; and if in their relations with one another they live up to the principles of "mutual respect, juridical equality, obligatory arbitration . . . social justice."

THE TRAGIC history of our times proves anew, as all history demonstrates, that high professions only have meaning where they reflect a real determination to act.

On that basis, Bramuglia's eloquent words are subject to very considerable discount. Argentina's record of international cooperation has not been particularly brilliant.

It is not being forgotten, for instance, that the South American republic is the only one that has defied the desires of the United Nations and maintained its ambassador at Madrid. Nor is the fact being lost to sight that at a time when international cooperation with respect to the world's food situation is absolutely imperative, Argentina has played a lone wolf and peculiarly selfish role.

THERE WAS, therefore, a meaure of politely concealed irony in General Marshall's reply to Bramuglia. While welcoming the latter's expression of "the Argentine Republic's high purpose" the Secretary of State took occasion to point out to what an extent the United States, for its part, has already been carrying out the program so enthusiastically advocated by Buenos Aires.

He cited the efforts made by the United States to help the stricken countries of Europe and Asia, its participation in the work of many United Nations organizations, its present efforts to bring about world recovery.

Although he did not directly do so, the implication to be drawn from Marshall's remarks was clear: If Argentina means what it says she will follow our example.

The Rio conference will be the first test of Argentina's good faith. There measures will be proposed to make the principle of hemisphere solidarity a living reality. The role played at the conference by the Peron government will show whether Argentina's actions are in line with her professions. That has clearly not been the case in the past.

Resignation Rumor Irking To Hannegan

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Robert E. Hannegan lately has been made to feel like the Irishman in Strickland Gillilan's poem, "Off ag'in, on ag'in, gone ag'in Finnigin,"—and he doesn't care for it a bit.

He has shown his displeasure in two ways.

One of the last things Hannegan did before taking off for Hawaii yesterday was to assure party officials over the telephone that he had not yet made up his mind whether to resign as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

He also canceled a suggestion he had made earlier for a meeting of the Democratic National Committee in mid-September.

Illness Forced Rest

Reports had been circulated that Hennegan had decided to resign both as Postmaster General and as Democratic National chairman. The reports started last winter when Hannegan was forced to take a long rest as the result of high blood pressure. But they were revived, and became more insistent, when Hannegan suggested a meeting of the Democratic National Committee.

Hannegan, in his telephone call from the West Coast, told party officials that his decision with respect to the Democratic national chairmanship would be announced after he comes to Washington, about September 1.

He explained that the decision would be made for him by Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, the White House physician. Graham has examined Hannegan from time to time at the White House and at Walter Reed Hospital.

Party chieftains say that Hannegan's Cabinet post will not be involved in the decision he is to announce upon his return from Hawaii. Apparently, he intends to hold on to the Postmaster Generalship even if he has to step down as Democratic chairman.

Anderson Seen Choice

A successor to Hannegan, if a change should be necessary, would be elected by the members of the Democratic National Committee, but President Truman would make the actual selection. The man most likely to be tapped, it appeared yesterday, would be Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson.

As matters stand, no meeting of the Democratic National Committee is now scheduled. The calling of such a meeting, however, cannot be long delayed.

Aside from the question of whether Hannegan is to leave or remain as chairman, there is the question of picking a city for the 1948 Democratic National Convention. The Republicans picked theirs—Philadelphia—some weeks ago.

San Francisco was reported yesterday to have the "inside track" for the Democratic conclave. Other cities that are being talked about are Philadelphia, Chicago, New York and Denver.

Pension Hike For Veterans Announced

John H. Grate, 102, of Atwater, Ohio, left, and William H. Osborn, 104, of Joplin, Mo., at 81st encampment of the G. A. R. at Cleveland yesterday

The Veterans Administration announced yesterday that some 258,000 veterans of three American wars and their dependents will receive increased peyments totaling approximately $36,704,000 annualy, effective September 1.

The increases, authorized in the last session of Congress, are calculated to meet increased living costs. They include:

1. Some 50,000 seriously disabled veterans of World War II, who will receive automatic boosts in educational allowances estimated at $7,704,000 in the first year. Their dependents will also benefit.

2. Approximately 208,000 Civil War and Spanish-American War veterans and dependents, who will get a 20 per cent pension increase costing the Government $29,000,000 for the first year.

The increases affect about 113,000 veterans of the two earlier wars and 95,000 dependents of deceased veterans. Pensions now average about $100 a month for Civil War veterans and $75 for Spanish-American War veterans. Dependents' death compensation averages more than $40 a month.

Veterans of World War II who are enrolled in educational or on-the-job training courses will receive $115 a month, without dependents, or $130 with one dependent, if their disability is rated at 30 per cent or higher. Under the old law, they received $105 and $115.

Veterans with a disability rating of less than 30 per cent will continue to get the same allowances as before.

Ex-MP Reverts To Type Spotting Youthful 'Major'

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP).—Bernard A. Mullins the patrolman became Major Bernard A. Mullins the military policeman again today long enough to put a would-be Army major back in mufti.

His eye attuned to rank from three wartime years as an MP, Mullins hailed a slightly built figure in GI khaki and majors' leaves.

"How old are you, major?" he asked with a touch of deference.

"Ninteen—sir," was the surprisingly polite reply.

"How long you been in the Army?" queried Mullins in a slightly hasher tone.

"Three years—sir," the uniformed figure whispered.

"Let's see your identification," roared the one-time MP.

Thereupon the "major admitted he was Ernest Barton Blett 3d, who had tried on his father's army uniform as a prelude to a Boy Scout camping trip.

The 14-year-old was sent home to be demobilized.

Store Workers Vote to Continue Own Union Setup

Woodward & Lothrop department stores voted better than two to one yesterday to continue recognition of their independent bargainin gagency, the Union of Woodward & Lothrop Employes.

William C. Humphrey, examiner for the National Labor Relations Board, said election results showed that a total of 3348 votes were cast out of a possible 4500 eligible voters.

Of the total, 2330 were for the independent union, 959 were for the Department Store Council (AFL), 34 wanted neither, 15 ballots were challenged, and 10 were declared void.

Humphrey said the independent union would be certified by the NLRB as the employes' bargaining agency within five days, providing the election is not protested within that time by interested parties.

Gold Refiners Assail Plan for Curb on Sales

By The Associated Press

Gold refiners yesterday protested proposed Treasury controls intended to curb speculative foreign transactions in gold at premium prices.

Several witnesses, while expressing general "sympathy" with the objective, opposed the proposed amendment of gold regulations and suggested instead "mutual agreements" between the Treasury and the companies.

Robert M. Stewart, president of the South American Development Co., said it was "out of all reason to suppose that gold is worth only $35 an ounce now, if that was a fair price when it was fixed in 1934."

He appealed to the Treasury not to "close this country as one to which other countries can send their gold to be refined," adding that "other nations can set up refining facilities at a modest cost."

Licenses for the private export of bar gold would no longer be issued, under the proposed controls.

Norman Tietjens, assistant general counsel for the Treasury, who presided at the hearing, said the Treasury would study the testimony and try to arrive at a decision "satisfactory to at least most of you." Other officials said some sort of amendment could be expected within a fortnight, but that any change would not be effective in less than 30 days.

Canadian Railway Embargo Ordered

By The Associated Press

The Office of Defense Transportation yesterday ordered an embargo on United States coal shipments into Canada by way of the government-owned Canandian National Railways, to help relieve the continued railroad car shortage in this country.

Canadian shipments by way of Canadian Pacific Railway Co. will not be affected by the order.

The embargo, effective Wednesday midnight, August 15, was invoked in a move to get United States coal cars now in Canada back on United States trackage.

It will remain in effect until a long-standing adverse balance of United States freight cars in Canada is further adjusted to a point where Canada will have not more than 8000 United States cars than United States railroads have Canadian cars.

The adverse balance got up to 18,000 cars six weeks ago, but has now been cut to 8124, as a result of a number of recent conferences between officials of the two countries.

Prison Killing Probe Reopened

Atlanta, Aug. 11 (AP).—The State Board of Corrections today abandoned its Negro prison camp at Brunswick, where eight inmates were shotgunned to death by guards last month, and voted to reopen its investigation of the killings.

At the same time, the board discontinued a similar highway camp for white prisoners in Charlton County.

The board authorized the Department of Corrections to distribute the 70 Negro prisoners at Brunswick and the 48 white prisoners at Charlton among county camps as soon as possible.

200 Crash Picket Line, Camp in Mich. Plant

Clinton, Mich., Aug. 11 (U.P.)—Some 200 workers crashed through a picket line into the strike-bound Clinton Machine Co. plant today and set up cots to stay the night.

At the same time, 40 State troopers arrived to take over law enforcement on orders from Gov. Kim Sigler.

Don Thomas, 200-pound company president who led a flying wedge of workers in a back-to-work movement this morning, sent in cots and food by truck after the 150-man picket line had relaxed its vigilance.

10 Hurt in Assault

More than 10 workers and pickets were injured in the assault and five were hurt later in isolated clashes. None was injured seriously.

The picket-line riot climaxed mounting tension in this town of 1100 population since 650 workers at the machine plant struck July 29 for higher wages.

W. H. Whitlock, president of UAW local 608, was trampled in the onslaught.

Pickets Jeer

Pickets reformed their lines later and jeered at those inside the plant.

"How will you get out now?" they shouted.

Officials feared further violence when the workers were scheduled to leave the plant at 3 p. m., but Thomas sent in cots and food.

Last Thursday the local chamber of commerce and a citizens' committee arranged a back-to-work election among strikers. Some 200 voted to return to work, but turned back in the face of 200 pickets.

Closed Shop in Contract

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—A contract that includes a closed shop clause outlawed by the Taft-Hartley law, and going into effect two days before the act becomes operative, wa sannounced yesterday by Local 557, Fregiht Drivers and Helpers (AFL).

Thomas J. Healy, business agent for the local, which represents employes at 134 trucking firms, said the contract was approved unanimously by the 3100 members.

The agreement includes a wage increase of $3.60 a week for drivers and helpers.

Employers will meet tomorrow to act on the contract.

May Continue Relations

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—The American Telephone and Telegraph Company said today it would continue contractual relations with the American Union of Telephone Workers, provided the union showed evidence by October 10 that it represented a majority of the 23,000 long lines employes.

On July 31, the A. T. & T. had notified the union it would no longer recognize the AUTW as exclusive bargaining agent for the long lines workers because of "recent developments," which included a union move for affiliation with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, followed by a membership vote favoring the affiliation.

MINDING YOUR BUSINESS

Banking Isn't What It Used to Be

THE man from Main st.—the business man from Kansas or Oklahoma or Florida—can now stop being sorry for himself just because he's a thousand miles or more away from Wall st. and wants to borrow money. Distance doesn't make the loan more costly. Not any more at any rate.

Samuel F. B. Morse, Alexander Graham Bell and Senator Carter Glass saw to that: Morse by inventing the telegraph, Bell the telephone, and Glass by fathering the Federal Reserve Act.

Livingston

Today funds are fluid. New York, Boston and Philadelphia are still centers of deposits for banks all ove rthe country. But funds, once they get there, aren't a coagulated mass of inactivity.

A bank in Nebraska can move its funds back and forth in a matter of hours—via telegraph, telephone and the facilities of the Reserve Banks. That means that if it has extra funds in New York and wants to call them back because local demands are heavy, it can do so. As a result, the Federal Reserve has deveolped into what it was intended to be—a credit reservoir.

ALL THIS is demonstrated in a study by Richard Youngdahl in the July issue of the Federal Reserve Bulletin. Youngdahl shows that it's not where your place of business is that counts in fixing the price of a loan, but how big it is, what it is, and how much you want to borrow. The bigger the loan, the lower the rate. Reasons: First, small firms usually are riskier than large firms; second, the bookkeeping costs of making small loans run higher per dollar lent than with large loans.

Size of firm, incidentally, goes far to explain why interest rates in the South, Midwest and Far West have always been higher than in the East. The bigger firms are in big centers of population in the East. And, obviously, the Standard Oil Co. or United States Steel or R. H. Macy & Co. can command a lower price in borrowing, than, say, a small independent refiner, or a local manufacturer, or the general store in a rural community.

Yet that's not the whole of it. Paradoxically, the depression and the war were geographical equalizers of money rates. When the Federal Government began spending money on a large scale—first for pump-priming, then for munitions—banks throughout the country began buying Government bonds: Monetizing the debt. They built up large lending power. If they didn't have ready reserves, they could convert their Government bonds into reserves. That put the small bank on a par with large banks. They could make low-interest loans, too.

AND, the large banks, laden with reserves, became merchants of debt—literally. Anybody who has a picture of a banker as a cautious, sedentary man, waiting at his desk for a borrower to come in is living in the nineteenth century. Bankers work. Emissaries of some of New York's largest banks—like the Chase National or National City—scour the country for loans, contacting local companies and offering lines of credit. So, the Main Street National, if it wants to hold on to its customers, has to begin charging Wall st. interest rates. Thus, interregional rivalry has forced down rural rates to borrowers who can command big-city credit ratings.

About 45 per cent of all money lent by banks commands the low interest rate of 2 per cent or less. Yet most business men don't get money so low. The 2 per cent or less rate is for only 3 per cent of the borrowers, for the firms that borrow in chunks of $100,000 or more. That's where size is a definite advantage. About a third of all loans carry a rate of 6 per cent to 7 per cent; about a fifth 5 per cent to 6 per cent; another fifth 4 per cent to 5 per cent.

The average size of the 6 per cent loan was $3000; of the 5 per cent loan, $7000; of the 4 per cent loan, $16,000; of the 3 per cent loan, $37,000; of the 2 per cent loan, $138,000, and of the 1 per cent loan, $154,000.

SMALL BORROWERS can do better in small cities than in large cities. On loans of less than $500 banks in cities of less than 5000 population charge 6.8 per cent on the average. In cities over 500,000 the rate is 7.9 per cent. Explanation: Small-city banks cater to small borrowers and most of their loans are small. Hence, they don't have to levy an extra charge on a customer just because he's small.

And here's a paradox. Medium and large-sized companies (those with assets of $250,000 and up) borrow money more cheaply without security than with security. Why? Because if the borrower were a Triple A risk to begin with, the bank would not ask for collateral. The opposite applies to small borrowers. The small business man or individual who can put up security does better, interest-rate-wise, than the man who can't.

The study reveals most clearly that banking is not a thing apart, that banking customs are based on common-sense. Thus: New firms have to pay higher rates than old firms. Construction companies pay relatively high rates—undoubtedly due to the high risks attending the rise and fall in realty values. Incorporated businesses usually pay lower rates than unincorporated enterprises of the same type; apparently incorporation implies continuity. And sales finance companies get the lowest rate of any type of borrower. Here experience—successful lending—has overcome prejudice. Back in the 'twenties, bankers looked upon installment selling as a dark art, hesitated to have a part in it. Nowadays, not only are banks anxious to lend money to sales finance companies, but they're competing for the installment loans themselves.

Scrap Iron Price Dips

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11 (AP).—Scrap brokers in the Pittsburgh district today reported a "slight weakening" in the market for heavy melting scrap iron, with buying prices slipping under the $42 per ton peak reached here last week.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—All grains ended with losses on the Board of Trade today in a session which developed wide price fluctuations and quick reversals of trend. Declines in corn ran to more than 7 cents at the finish.

Throughout the session the market was active and nervous, taking its cue from corn. That grain declined shortly after the start, then ran up to new record peaks, subsequently plunged the full eight cent limit permitted in a single session and finally rallied from the extreme lows.

Final prices on corn were 4½-7⅜ lower, September $2.33-2.33¾, wheat was 2⅛ to 4 cents lower, September, $3.35¾-2.35½, and oats were 1½-2⅛ lower, September $2.38¾-2.35½.

Traders considered corn's decline a natural technical development following the spectacular upturn last week. Forecast for a few scattered thundershowers in parts of Nebraska and Iowa served, as a reason for profit-taking, although needed heavy rains were not predicted.

After the close, the Agriculture Department forecast a crop of 2,689,949,000 bushels against 2,770,930,000 forecast on July 15. Today's report was as of August 1, and grain experts believe deterioration has continued since that date.

Failure of the Production and Marketing Administration to raise its flour buying price hampered wheat. England's plan to reduce food imports and reports the English-Russian trade pact talks may be resumed were other restraining factors.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Cotton futures were reactionary today under pressure of liquidation and some hedging against the new crop movement. Trading was fairly active and the market at one time was $3.85 a bale lower, but at the close short covering and mill buying reduced final losses to $1.35 to $2.90 a bale.

The favorite cotton crop report issued last week and forecasts of showers in east and west Texas, where rains would be beneficial to the crop, induced some of the selling.

Wreco to Offer Rights to Buy Transit Stock

By S. Oliver Goodman

As part of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. (Wreco) dissolution plan, Capital Transit Co. yesterday registered with the SEC 120,000 shares of $1 par common stock.

The shares are outstanding and owned by Wreco, which proposes to offer to holders of its common stock of record August 26 rights to purchase at $20 a share on the basis of two shares of Capital Transit stock for each share of Wreco common held. On the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday bid price was $25 for the transit stock.

North American Co., parent of Wreco and owner of 50,197 of its common shares, will be issued rights to purchase 90,394 shares of the transit stock as well as any shares not purchased by other common stockholders.

As previously reported, Wreco will use proceeds together with approximately $455,990 of other funds toward payment of $2,800,000 outstanding bank loans.

SALAD ERA: America's expanding appetite for salads boosted the mayonnaise and salad dressing industry into the "100-million-dollar" class in 1946, Commerce Department reported last night. Commercial production totaled 57,900,000 gallons, the highest on record except in 1944, when production was 800,000 gallons higher. Higher prices last year brought the sales value to about 112 million dollars, more than 16 millions above the 1944 sales.

15TH ST. PERSONALITY: Charles B. Quarles is unique when it comes to vacations. Knocks off work at 4 p. m. instead of 5:30 and calls that his vacation. Has been manager of Washington branch office of Orvis Bros. & Co. since November, 1941. Was associated with predecessor firm, Mackubin Legg & Co. from 1930 to 1941. Native of Halifax County, Va., he came to Washington in 1919 after Army service. First entered wholesale drug, turned to real estate brokerage business, then switched to securities. He attended Hampden-Sydney College, likes to golf and hunt quail. A pro football fan, this is the seventh consecutive year that he's the proud owner of a season ticket. In his late 40s, he's careful of his weight except when porterhouse steaks are available. That leisurely southern Virginia drawl fools you—actually he's lightning in executing customers' orders.

BULLS AND BEARS: Stocks are selling at unusually low levels in relation to earnings, said W. B. Hibbs & Co. . . . There is nothing unusual, or unduly disturbing in the character of the corrective reaction to date, comments Poor's Investment Advisory Service . . . Unlike the summer of 1946, we are now within just a few months of the time when earnings and dividends may turn down importantly. A business recession is not now far away, according to Moody's Stock Survey.

TRADE WINDS: Chase National Bank in survey of 30 major oil firms reported 1946 net income totaled 763 million dollars, a new record and 44 per cent better than 1941 . . . Passenger tire shipments in first half amounted to 36,323,946 and 18.5 per cent increase over 1946 period . . . Colonial Stores, Inc., sales for 30 weeks ended July 26 soared 36.5 per cent to $91,409,016 . . . Steel operations this week scheduled at 93.2 per cent, a dip of 1.8 per cent from last week . . . Glyco Products Co. announced average 20 per cent price cut on 50 organic chemicals used by rubber, paint, cosmetic industries . . .

EARNINGS: Western Union Telegraph Co. reported net income for six months ended June 30 of $6,258,355, equal to $5.09 a Class A share, compared with net loss of $6,832,438 in same 1946 period. Earnings upsurge attributed to extraordinary volume of telegraph business resulting from telephone strike in April and May. Other income reports yesterday included:

Jap Super-Colossal

'China Nights' Cost $300,000

By Richard L. Coe

IF THIS WORLD isn't crazy, what is it? Bill Odom goes around the globe in 73 hours, English-speaking countries can't find a way to exchange films and it takes 10 years for a Japanese picture to reach a small Washington audience.

Bill's flight is certainly offset by the mess of Anglo-American movie exchange, with science once more making monkeys of human beings. So let's talk about that Japanese film the Army screened for a handful of the curious yesterday at the Pentagon.

It's called "Shina No Yoru" which means "China Nights." (As a matter of fact, Translator Lieut. Karl Simons points out, it could be just one night, as there are no plurals in Japanese.) It's 10 years old, has three alternate endings and concerns the Japanese occupation of China after the bombing of Shanghai back in '32. It will not be publicly shown in this country.

We'd expected "China Nights" to be a complete lemon, but, believe us, we've seen a lot worse. Technically, it's enough to make a professional film-maker groan smugly with disdain, but essentially its story is no worse than our own wartime propaganda films.

It is frank propaganda, tossed out in the days when Japan was trying to win sympathy for its occupation of a neighboring country. The story concerns a young Japanese merchant seaman who befriends a Chinese girl in the Japanese quarter of international Shanghai. She came from a wealthy family, now scattered by the war. She wants nothing to do with her conquerors, but the film goes to a pack of trouble to show you that Japan is only befriending her country and that as individuals they're pretty right guys.

A Super De Luxe Release

Seeing such a film brings home the enormity of the movies' influence. This, we are told, is the "Gone With the Wind" of the Japanese screen, a super-terrific de luxe effort which cost about $300,000. Normally a class B film in prewar Japan cost from $1000 to $3000 to produce, wages and overhead being as low as the country's living scale.

This condition brings out the most effective facet of "China Nights"—its setting of bombed Shanghai. By employing cheaply, the actual background of the story, there is a sense of reality that makes it often effective.

Were such an effort directed not to the so-called glories of Japan's conquest but to the truth that peoples on the other side of the world have much the same aspirations that we do, perhaps Bill Odom's flight would mean more than just a scientific triumph.

Ooo, That Kiss!

Though the film is just under two hours (and seems four), it also illustrates the western world's influence on the east. Background music of such tunes as "Siboney," shops where English is spoken, the common use of "Ma" and "Papa" for mother and father may fall with surprise on our ears, but the fact is that these and many other customs of our civilization are accepted without much comment around the world. Bill Odom's flight may yet mean something.

It would be simple to have a lot of fun with "China Nights." It's a scene of the hero actually kissing the heroine (a longshot) is, Lieut. Simons tells us, extremely daring and caused criticism when it appeared. It's long on weepy scenes, but the Japanese like this. Matter of fact, there are three endings. The one we saw was made for Americanized Japanese and has a happy finish. The ending for Japan had the hero killed and the heroine a suicide. The third, made for the Singapore area, wound up with the heroine, thinking her lover dead, wading to her death in a river too soon for the hero's safe return.

But somehow, it all struck us as being more pathetic than funny. Mr. Edison's great invention for civilization brought to base uses.

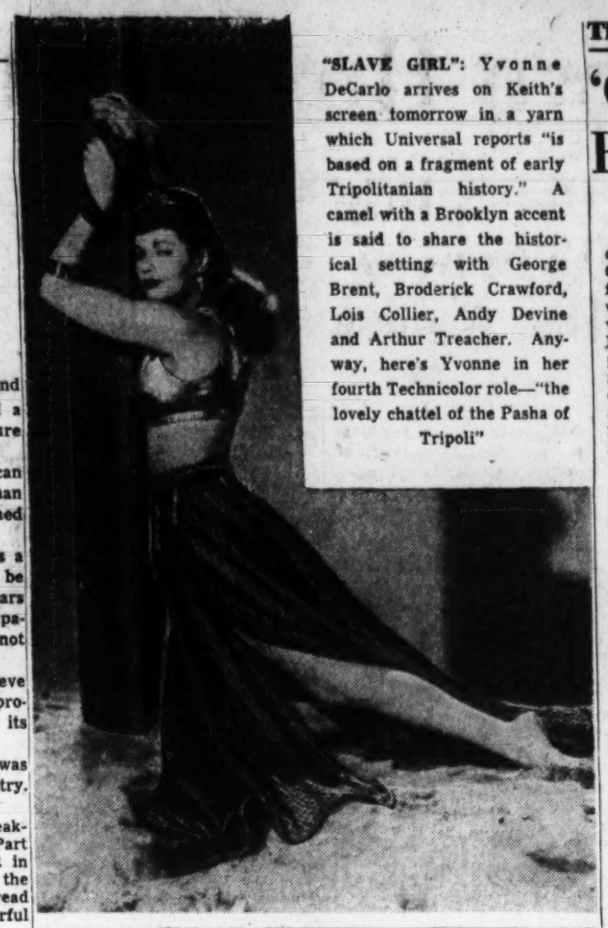
CONTINUED DEPT.: Yesterday we were telling you about "Life with 'Oklahoma!'," but somewhere between our desk and your breakfast table the gremlins struck. Part of our labored words got lost in the mechanical maze. Here's the rest of what you would have read about the bright musical's cheerful people:

NICKNAMES are rampant. For a while there was a Russian period, which someday may make John Frederics tremble in his hat-making atelier. After Dancer Lawrence had dubbed Pat Shay "Malada," she called him "Igor." Now "Igor Original" is cropping up as a trade name in the hats Lawrence has begun to create for his girl friends so he'll have something to do if he breaks his back. London's Shakespearean actress Davie Gladstone is currently brightening dreary Mayfair with them. (Don't think that because a male dancer also designs hats you can whistle at him; try it and the six-footer will clip you on the jaw). Dorothy Swain is known as "Boo-Boo the luscious blond showgirl from Camden," because she hates movie fan magazines on train trips and Patricia Crowe changes the color of her hair every week.

TRAVEL over a two-year period is rough and expensive. The kids have been everywhere, with the restaurants of New Orleans and San Francisco among their happiest memories. Sometimes they manage to rent an apartment so they can get good food cheaper from their own pots and pans, which have space in their crowded trunks. Sunday afternoon they'll be leaving at 1:30 to arrive next morning at 7:30 in Detroit. Then comes a full day getting settled for opening that night. And on the train some of the kids will be taunting Wardrobe Mistresses Lillian Martin and Lyle Leake about spending all their time in the diner.

WASHINGTON? They like it here, though departmental talk takes a little getting used to. "I'm learning my alphabet all over again," says Pat Shay. They miss Mrs. Perle Mesta, the Capital's lavish party thrower, herself an Oklahoman, who owns a good chunk of the show and entertained them last visit. Working on a building job has been Tommy Cleland, who travels with his wife, Louise Fornaca, "The Girl Who Falls Down." Tommy boasts he's laid a brick in every city of the USA.

SO FABULOUS "Oklahoma!" rolls on, mixing old-timers and youngsters. Theater Guild heads pop in unexpectedly to check on their golden goose. All we hope is that they won't let their bright wonder roll down into the shoddy road company versions you've seen of "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince." That's a threat, Lawrence Langner; a threat, Terry Helburn!



"SLAVE GIRL": Yvonne DeCarlo arrives on Keith's screen tomorrow in a yarn which Universal reports "is based on a fragment of early Tripolitanian history." A camel with a Brooklyn accent is said to share the historical setting with George Brent, Broderick Crawford, Lois Collier, Andy Devine and Arthur Treacher. Anyway, here's Yvonne in her fourth Technicolor role—"the lovely chattel of the Pasha of Tripoli"

'Green Bowl' Members Hold Key Posts in Navy

By Drew Pearson

The Navy at long last has ordered an investigation of the Green Bowlers, powerful secret fraternity inside Annapolis whose members are charged with boosting each other to top Navy commands. However, this probe so far has been secret and no one knows how it will come out. Meanwhile, this column also has been delving into the mysterious Green Bowlers, and here are some of the results:

The name derives from the green bowl on the mantelpiece of the organization's first clubroom on the second floor of Carvel Hall, Annapolis. Roland Munroe Brainard, class of 1906, is reported to have been one of the first members, though the Green Bowlers did not really get active until 1909.

Today, with 28 admirals and one Marine Corps general, the Green Bowlers are a long way from the little band of drinking companions formed 40 years ago. Many of them are placed in key spots where they influence promotions and can dominate the Navy.

The Green Bowlers operate through a secret but simple system. Every year Green Bowlers on duty as faculty members of the Naval Academy pick new Green Bowlers from politically minded or outstanding midshipmen. Among the Green Bowlers stationed at the Academy has been crew coach C. S. (Buck) Walsh, '23.

Green Bowlers who have been in key spots to influence promotions include Rear Admiral O. B. Hardison, who served two tours of duty in the officers' detail section of the Bureau of Aeronautics, also as aide to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Artemus Gates. Admiral E. P. Forrestel was aide to Undersecretary Bard, while E. B. Taylor has been aide to Secretary Forrestal. These posts, close to the civilian Secretaries of the Navy, are considered most influential.

The Merry-Go-Round

The President now has a pair of $84 garters. Window-shopping along Connecticut ave., he inspected the jewelry store of Grape & Co., spied a pair of black garters with gold buckles. Price: $84 . . . Later he sent back, bought the garters, had the buckles monogrammed . . . Gen. Terry Allen, who was sent home from North Africa at one point during the war, has just been denied a radio station in El Paso, Texas. Reason: The Federal Communications Commission ruled that since he owned only 11 per cent of the stock, the proposed station would actually be owned by financiers outside El Paso. FCC rules are that radio stations must be locally owned . . . Alf Landon, former Governor of Kansas, came a cropper in trying to get a radio station at Inglewood, Colo., largely for the same reason. After he applied for a license, more than 100 affidavits poured into the FCC saying Landon's station was unneeded in Inglewood.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BOSTON, AUG. 11.—The possibility that George Case may hang up the spiked shoes that carried him around the basepaths faster than any other mortal, recalls that he made a lucrative profession out of thievery.

POVICH

Base-stealing was a serious business with Case. He worked for a man, Clark Griffith, who knew the value of a stolen base and fancied himself as a patron of the art. Griffith, who had previous base stealing champions in Clyde Milan and Sam Rice, took new pride in Case, who wheedled many an extra thousand dollars out of the Nats' owner. Case worked himself up to a $15,000 salary with the Nats though he was no consistent .300 hitter.

Case, too, had a fierce pride in his speed. He always wanted to be known as the fastest man in baseball and he was, to the end. No Olympic dash man ever trained more seriously for the match races than Case. He couldn't quite afford to lose because the second fastest man in the majors didn't rate the salary of the fastest guy and, anyway, he wanted to retire unbeaten.

A FEW YEARS AGO, he revealed one of his secrets of base stealing. Like every other honest base thief, he admitted that he stole his bases on the pitcher, rarely on the catcher. And like every other fast man with ambition to steal bases, he made a study of the delivery and habits of the league's pitchers.

"I'm licked," he said, "when I get on first base and the pitcher takes the ball up to his chest and holds it there. That's all a pitcher has to do to wear a base-stealer out—just hold that ball and stare over to first base. The longer he holds it, the more zip he takes out of a fellow trying to steal. It gets to be a game of nerves then, and the pitcher has all the better of it.

"You can't take a big lead against a pitcher who gives you that business of holding the ball and just looking at you. And you can't get a fast break, either, because your pep oozes after a while. There are few pitchers smart enough to know that he can devitalize (my word) a base stealer with that little trick."

CASE HAD another trade secret that he admitted at that time. He confessed that he was always able to take a longer lead off first base against the Boston Red Sox than against other teams. But it wasn't due to any edge he had on the pitchers of that club. He was getting a break from the first baseman, Jimmy Foxx.

"Don't mention this until Foxx or I am out of the league," he said. "But Jimmy made it easier for me to steal. I don't know whether he was plain lazy, or was giving me too much credit for being able to get back to the base on a pick-off throw—but, anyway, Foxx was content just to catch the pitcher's throw. He never tried to put the ball on me, for some reason."

Case rated the league's catchers in his own way. He always considered Frankie Hayes of the Athletics, and later Cleveland, as the easiest catcher to steal a base against. The toughest, he said, was Paul Richards of the Tigers, and the next catcher to nail him the most times was Mike Tresh of the White Sox. "I got a break when I didn't have to run against Jake Early of Washington."

CASE WAS fortunate in one respect. He didn't have to run against a couple of old-time pitchers famed for their ability to keep runners hugging the bases. Sam Jones didn't throw to first base a half dozen times a season, because of the respect he commanded from base runners.

Al Crowder was another pitcher who rarely had to make a throw to first to keep a runner close to the bag. He explained it to me one day, saying, "Naw, I don't have to throw over there much. Those guys know I've got a good motion to first, so they just stay close to the bag. When I do throw, I mean business.

"All I do is bring that ball up to my chest and cock my head over to first base. If I can see the base runner, I don't throw. He hasn't got a big enough lead to hurt me. But if I cock my head that way and don't see him, brother, he's too far off, and when I do throw he's mine."

Vicious Nats Shut Out by Bosox, 1 to 0

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, July 11.—Little Mickey Haefner lost a pitching duel to Earl Johnson tonight as the Boston Red Sox defeated the woebegone Nats, 1 to 0.

Johnson let Washington down with three scattered hits and nothing that resembled a run while Haefner, although nicked for 10 hits, was mighty stingy in the pinches.

The Nats obtained their first hit off Johnson when Haefner bounced a single off the Boston pitcher's glove with one out in the third inning, but Eddie Yost then drilled a double-play grounder at Shortstop Johnny Pesky.

Mele Slaps Out Homer

Buddy Lewis walked with one out in the first, but Johnson converted Tom McBride's tap into a double play. In the second inning, Mickey Vernon walked, moved to second on Stan Spence's infield out and to third when Johnson tossed out Mark Christman. Mickey was stranded when Dom DiMaggio caught Jerry Priddy's deep drive.

An infield single by DiMaggio with two out in the first inning and another single by Birdie Tebbetts which took a weird hop over Christman's head at short was the only damage inflicted on Haefner in the first two innings.

With one out in the third inning, Sam Mele pumped his eighth homer of the year over the left field fence with none on. Heafner fanned Pesky, but DiMaggio singled to left and Ted Williams singled to right, sending DiMaggio to third. A walk to Bobby Doerr filled the bases, but Haefner averted further trouble when he got Murrell Jones on a foul to Vernon.

One Hit in Six Innings

Young Jhonson, whose previous start against the Nats was a two-hit job in the eight innings he worked, was pitching one-hit ball through the first six innings tonight and maintaining a 1-0 lead.

In the sixth, the Nats put the tying run on third base with one out, despite the lack of a hit. Haefner drew a walk after Evans grounded out, and he raced to third when Doerr bobbled a soft grounder by Yost. At that point, Buddy Lewis hit into Boston's third double play of the game, Johnson to Pesky to Jones.

Haefner averted damage in both the fifth and sixth. Williams doubled off the left field wall in the fifth with one out, but was stranded there. Tebbetts led off with a single to center and was throw nout trying to steal on the next pitch.

A sensational catch by DiMaggio blighted the Nats' seventh inning. He raced into the deep center field corner for a one-hand grab of McBride's long drive.

With two out in the eighth, the Nats got their second hit off Johnson, an infield single by Al Evans on which Pesky had no play. Haefner grounded to Doerr for the third out.

The Redsox threatened to get another run off Haefner in the eighth before their rally was quelled amid an uproar that saw Umpire Joe Rue throw both Coach Del Baker and Manager Joe Cronin out of the game for disputing a decision at third base.

Baker, Cronin Chased

Doerr opened the inning with a single to left and took second when Tom McBride booted the ball. After Jones popped up, Tebbetts was given an intentional pass, and on a double steal attempt, Rue called Doerr out at third.

Baker squawked so long that Rue banished him from the game with a flourish as the 24,043 fans booed. Joe Cronin raced from the dugout to replace Baker but before another ball was pitched he, too, was in a noisy argument with Rue. The umpire heaved him out, also, and Cronin slammed a glove to the ground in rage, and then booted it almost into the field boxes.

Coach Larry Woodall finally took over the third-base coaching, papers and score cards were showered on the field. Incidentally, Haefner got the side out without a run.

The Nats got the tying run on base with two out in the ninth to no avail. Following Doerr's fancy one-hand play on Buddy Lewis' grounder, McBride singled to center but Vernon left him on base with a grounder to Doerr.

Feller Plans Post-Season 15-Game Trip

Cleveland, Aug. 11 (AP).—Bob Feller announced his post-season barnstorming plans tonight, with a flying schedule of 10 games in the United States, followed by a five-game stint with the Cuban League.

Feller said he figured on 15 games, including the Cuban visit, but in listing American dates gave several tentative figures which added up to 11. Membership of the team he will manage on the American trip has not been completed, but will include Jim Hegan, Ken Keltner and Bob Lemon of the Indians, as it did last year. He said.

Feller also plans to take along Johnny Price, the baseball entertainer, and Max Patkin, who doubles as coach and comedian. Lefty Weisman, the Indians' will accompany the squad again. Stan Musial of the Cardinals may also be a member of the team.

THE TOUR STARTS October 8, earliest date allowed by the major league rules, and the American section of the schedule ends on October 19. Then Feller will fly to Cuba to pitch five games with the Alamaderes team, which will be managed by Catcher Mike Guerra of the Philadelphia Athletics. The hurler said he understood the Cuban season opens October 9.

Feller said he would conclude his barnstorming on November 8, under the rule allowing only 30 days of post-season competition.

He added that he anticipated no difficulty in obtaining clearance with the Cleveland club and the baseball commissioner's office regarding his appearances with the Cuban team.

"I had it stipulated in the contract that no ineligible players would appear, and I'll have a list of players," said Bob. "In Cuba they're part of organized baseball, and we can play there without difficulty."

THE AMERICAN TOUR starts with Atlanta on October 8, Birmingham October 9, Chattanooga October 10 and either Memphis or New Orleans on October 11. The following day Feller's team will play in either Dallas or Houston, Tex. Oklahoma City is listed as a tentative engagement for October 13.

Through the South and Southwest Feller's team will play pick-up teams, except in Birmingham, where its opposition will be an all-star squad managed by Ben Chapman, manager of the Phillies.

Next comes a trip to the West Coast, where all the contests will be with all-star Negro teams. The schedule: Los Angeles, October 14; San Diego, October 15; Oakland, October 17; San Francisco, October 18 ,and Los Angeles, October 19.

Feller said he had received very attractive offers from Puerto Rico and Venezuela, but felt he could not arrange his schedule to match theirs, and was forced to decline.

Hursey Held To Draw by Dan Kapilow

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

BULLETIN

Smuggy Hursey, of Washington, and Danny Kapilow, of Brooklyn, fought a 10-round draw at Griffith Stadium last night in a rather tame affair.

A crowd in excess of 16,000 persons converged on Griffith Stadium last night to watch Smuggy Hursey, Washington middleweight, tangle with Danny Kapilow of New York.

This was the third match between the pair with each owning a victory. Kapilow outpointed Hursey in an eight-rounder two years ago while Hursey scored a sensational 41-second, one-punch kayo in their last meeting on July 14 of this year.

Hursey at 155, held a 5-pound weight advantage over Kapilow. The Smug, unbeaten in 14 straight bouts and recently ranked the eighth leading middleweight contender by the Ring Magazine, was 12-5 ringside favorite, but there were plenty of Kapilow takers.

Hursey's Stablemate Loses

There wa sa bad omen for Hursey in a six-round preliminary as his flashy stablemate, Sonny Boy West, suffered his first defeat after 11 straight triumphs. Harry LaSane, 130, of Houston, Tex., was the kid who put the brakes on West, although West outweighed him by three pounds.

Roscoe Mercer, 144, of Washington, opened the show by stopping Boyd Berry, 148, also of Washington, in the second of a scheduled four; Heavyweight Billy Lanhan dropped Al Edwards of Washington, in the last round of a six.

A crowd of 13,735 paid a gross of $40,987.06. The net was $30,892.12.

FBI Tramples Underwood

The Federal Bureau of Investigation baseball team routed the Underwood Corporation nine, 17-2, yesterday in the first playoff game of the City Series on the South Ellipse.

FBI, the Departmental League champion, put the game on ice in the third inning with a 7-run rally, and added 7 more in the next two frames. Underwood had won the Anacostia Recreation Department title.

5 Top Drivers Race at Lanham

Five top midget automobile racing pilots have entered the weekly seven-event competition set for the West Lanham (Md) Speedway Friday night, 8:30 o'clock.

Larry Bloomer, Mike Joseph, Shorty McAndrews, Walt Fair and Ernie McCoy have been booked.

George Fonder, Lansdale, Pa., Offenbacher driver, who has won 11 of his last 12 starts at Lanham and who has compted and who completed his second grand slam in three weeks by sweeping three events last Friday, looms as No. 1 man in Friday's field.

Mueller Benched By Injury to Toe

Cincinnati, Aug. 11 (AP).—An injury to his big toe on his right foot today benched Ray Mueller, veteran Cincinnati Reds catcher, for an indefinite period.

X-ray pictures taken today indicated that Mueller received a "probable fracture" in Chicago yesterday when a foul tip struck him on the foot.

Steelers Drop Two

Cambridge Springs, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—The Pittsburg Steelers of the National Football League today released two more players as the second week of training began and continued negotiations with two others.

Released were Fullback Ed Sturcken, 205-pounder from Texas A. and M., and wingback Harmon Rowe, from the University of San Francisco.

That May Not Be Easy

Mr. Lujack of Irish Looking Forward to Spanking Cadets

Quarterback Johnny Lujack, of Notre Dame, wasn't a party to the two wartime massacres the Irish suffered at the hands of Army, but he'll be there at South Bend this fall giving a little something extra in the hope of making the Cadets remember those humiliating shellackings the Irish suffered.

"Coach Frank Leahy has never been one to run up a score on a team," Lujack, visiting here, said yesterday, "but I don't think he'll mind so much if we sort of sock it to 'em as hard as we can.

"But that won't be easy," he interjected, "because the Army will still be tough despite the absence of Blanchard and Davis. They'll have a powerful first team, but will suffer from the lack of stout reserves.

"How will we be? Coach Leahy, of course, is moaning, but I think we'll have a great ball club. We lost only three regulars from last year, but our replacements are terrific."

The 185-pound All-American quarterback completes his eligibility at South Bend this season, but that doesn't mean his football days are over.

"Sure, I'll play pro ball," said the Connellsville, Pa., passing wizard, "but I don't know for whom. Both the Chicago Bears and Chicago Rockets have drafted me and the one that puts the most in my pay envelope will get me, I guess."

Lujack has been spending the past few days practicing with the College All-Stars who, by the strangest of coincidences, happen to be coached by Leahy.

"And we've had a few 'visitors' from Notre Dame, too," he smiled.

Packer Barred For 'Jumping'

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 11 (AP).—In the first such action since he became professional football commissioner a year ago, Bert Bell today ordered immediate five-year suspension of Fred Vant Hull, veteran Green Bay Packer guard, for violation of the National League's "contract jumping" rule.

Packer Coach E. L. (Curly) Lambeau said Vant Hull had been released and that he had been informed by Bell the suspension was ordered because the former Minnesota lineman played with the Los Angeles Dons of the All-America Conference last season.

Under the ruling, Lambeau said he was informed, Vant Hull will be ineligible to play, coach or be associated with any team in the National, Dixie, American or Pacific Coast football leagues.

Vant Hull was a member of the 1942 Packer squad. He joined Los Angeles last fall following his release from the Navy after contacting the Packers, whose roster was filled at the time, Lambeau said.

He was signed this year, according to Lambeau, on the assumption his case did not come under the suspension rule because he had contacted the club prior to signing with the Dons a year ago.

The commissioner's directive declared, however, that Vant Hull mechanically had jumped his contract because he never had been released or waived out of the National League before signing with the All-America loop.

Three Tie in Women's Golf

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 11 (AP).—Two relatively new players in tournament golf and a veteran campaigner tied for medalist honors today with two-over-par 77's in the qualifying round of the 47th annual Women's Western Amateur.

The pair were 22-year-old Beverly Hanson, 1947 North Dakota State champion from Fargo, and 21-year-old Carol Diringer of Tiffin, Ohio, the 1946 Toledo District titlist. Miss Hanson authored a 38—39 for her card on the par 37-38—75 layout and Miss Diringer fashioned 37—40.

The veteran in the low scoring trio was 24-year-old Margaret Bunter of Memphis, Tenn., who was among eight 1947 State champions to qualify. She had a 37-40—77.

Grace Lenczyk of Hartford, Conn., 1947 Tam O'Shanter women's champion was only two strokes off the pace with 39-40—79.

Among those shooting 80 was Louise Suggs of Atlanta, Ga., who is aiming for the first double slam in WWGA history by winning both the Amateur and Open titles in successive years.

Two more State champions, Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., and Dorothy Ellis of Indianapolis, were bunched at 82 with Jean Perkins, Cleveland; Shirley Spork, Detroit, and Carol Clark, Cincinnati.

Among those failing to make the grade here were Mary Cordingly of Des Moines, the Iowa State champion, who soared to 91, and the Maryland State titlist, Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, who shot 89.

St. Louis Loses, 5-2; Wins, 8-4

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—The cellar dwelling St. Louis Browns split a double header with the Chicago White Sox today, losing the first game, 5-2, and winning the second, 8-4, behind Clif Fannin's six-hit pitching for his third victory over the Sox and his fourth of the season.

Joe Haynes was the winning pitcher in the opener. He worked seven innings to gain his No. 7 victory before young Pete Gebrian finished.

Rudy York continued his August home run blasting by getting one in each game to lift his season total to 16. York has hit five so far this month to keep pace with his still standing major league record of 18 homers during the month of August in 1937.

Worsham to Play In Tam O'Shanter

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Golf Promoter George S. May announced today that Lew Worsham, Ben Hogan and Jim Demaret had accepted invitations to compete in the Tam O'Shanter International championship September 27-28.

Worsham qualified for the meet as United States Open titlist, Demaret as Masters champion and Hogan as the Chicago Victory Open champion. All three were absent from May's recent All-American Open. Hogan and Demaret refused to play because May insisted the pros wear identifying numbers or take a slash in winnings. Worsham demurred because he wanted a "guarantee" to compete.

Wightman Cup Defenders Named

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Headed by Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, the new Wimbledon champion, five of the Nation's leading women tennis stars were named today to defend the Wightman Cup against the British next Saturday and Sunday at Forest Hills.

The others chosen were Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif.; Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd, Hidden Valley, Calif.; Doris Hart, Miami, Fla., and Shirley Fry, Akron, Ohio.

Five singles and two doubles matches comprise the two-day program. It was anticipated that the United States doubles teams would consist of Osborne-Brough and Hart-Todd, with Miss Fry, a newcomer to cup play, confining herself to singles.

Best Team I've Ever Coached, Says Flaherty of Grid Pros

Cheshire, Conn., Aug. 11 (AP).—There's no secret here that the New York Yankee footballers expect to duplicate in the autumn the current success of the baseball Yanks.

Listen to Head Coach Ray Flaherty: "I never had better material to work with and, unless we are hit by a run of bad breaks, this should be the best football team I've ever coached."

The balding Flaherty should know. As player, assistant coach and head tutor, he can look back on having been in nine professional championship playoffs with the New York Giants, Washington Redskins and New York Yankees.

High on his line, Flaherty also confesses the backfield hardly can be improved upon. Frank (Fireball) Sinkwich, no longe bothered by the shattered cartilege in his left knee; Spec Sanders; Eddie Prokop; Bob Kennedy and Lowell Wagner hardly can wait for the campaign to get underway. Neither can two leading freshmen, Buddy Young of Illinois and Ben Raimondi of Indiania.

"You can have Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside," smiled Flaherty of the Army's Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis, "I'll Take Mr. Thunder (Sinkwich and Mr. Lightening (Young)."

Babe Competing In Amateur Again; Spikes Pro Rumors

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Despite numerous lucrative offers to turn professional again, Mrs. Mildred Babe Didrikson Zaharias defends her National Women's Amateur Golf championship at Detroit September 22-27, her sports promoter and husband, George Zaharias, said tonight.

Zaharias said that the Babe had received many offers to cash in on her prowess even before she went over to Scotland in June to become the first American to win the British women's golf title.

Among them, Zaharias said, was a deal to make a series of golf shorts such as Bobby Jones did when the famed Georgian said good-by to big-time golf.

"We're not thinking too much about it now," Zaharias added. "The Babe is getting too much fun out of playing in the tournaments."

It had been rumored recently that the popular all-around athlete planned to turn pro before the Detroit tourney with a $50,000 offer for the movie shorts the big incentive.

He appeared in 13 games this season, mostly in relief roles, and has a record of 1-3. Smith went to the White Sox from the Philadelphia Athletics, who got him in 1936 from Williamsport of the New York- Pennsylvania League.

Rockets Ask Waivers on 4

Two Rivers, Wis., Aug. 11 (AP).—The Chicago Rockets today placed four rookies on the waiver list—Halfback Earl Perkins of Eau Claire State Teachers College, Tackle Don Durno of Montreal University, Center Harvey James of Miami and End Bob Hein of Kent (Ohio) State College.

Kell Is Tied By Boudreau

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Lou Boudreau, Cleveland shortstop, climbed back to the top rung of the American League batting line-up in the last week, but found George Kell, Detroit third baseman, still there to share it with him.

Both have a .340 average, including games of Sunday. It was an increase of 5 points for Kell, who replaced Boudreau as top hitter a week ago, and 6 points for Lou.

Next in line were Joe DiMaggio, New York, .326; Luke Appling, Chicago, .322; Ted Williams, Boston, .316; Dale Mitchell, Cleveland, and Barney McCosky, Philadelphia, .315; Johnny Pesky, Boston, .312, and George McQuinn, New York, and Taft Wright, Chicago, .303.

Pesky again led in hits with 134, a gain of 10 over last week. His teammate, Williams, led in three categories: Runs 86, runs batted in 75, and home runs 25. Boudreau had the most doubles, 32, and Mickey Vernon, Washington first baseman, led in triples with 10.

Vic Baschi, the New York Yankees' rookie righthander, remained leading pitcher with five wins and no defeats, the same tally as last week.

Head, Rurak Survive Tests

Manchester-By-The-Sea, Mass., Aug. 11 (AP).—The two top favorites of the Essex County women's twenties annual Invitation Tennis Tournament—Dorothy Head of Alameda, Calif., and Mme. Magda Rurak of Roumania, found the going rough but survived the first round today.

Miss Head was forced to three sets by 20-year-old Noreen Haney of Summit, N. J., before winning, 7—5, 5—7, 7—5 and Miss Rurak turned back Mrs. Raymond Deston, 6—2, 7—9, 6—2.

How to Play Tennis

This is the second of a series of articles by the District's leading tennis players in conjunction with The Washington Post-Recreation Department Tennis School.

The Forehand

By Jim Thackara

THE FOREHAND is the easiest and most natural stroke for a tennis player to make. Therefore, it is the chief attacking stroke.

In hitting a forehand, get your backswing started long before the ball reaches you. Don't wait until the last minute to swing. Hit the ball when it is still a little in front of you, not when it has reached you or partly passed by.

Thackara

Take a full even swing and don't try to kill the ball. Just stroke it easily. If you hit it solidly you will get plenty of pace on the ball.

The forehand is your attacking stroke, but you must wait for the right opportunity to make full use of it. Wait until your opponent hits a weak shot to your forehand, then drive it deep to either corner of his court. Follow your attacking shots to the net and put away his return.

KEEP YOUR FOREHAND DEEP. By this I mean that you should attempt to make your shots land within three feet of the baseline. This will keep your opponents on the defensive. When you hit short shots that land around the service line, your opponent will be able to hit deep and get you in trouble. So hit deep and don't give him that opportunity.

Don't hit the ball down the middle of the court. Aim for either sideline and practice hitting down the line or cross court. Develop your accuracy by constant practice and don't be discouraged if you lose points by hitting out of bounds. Keep trying for those corners and some day it will pay off.

Out Fishing

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., Aug. 11. — Traveling northwest to the Pacific Coast seeking places to fish for trout and salmon, our trip to this point has not been without interest.

Stopping over in Chicago, we met Lawrence Richey, former secretary to President Herbert Hoover. Larry was on his way East, after a fishing trip in southwest California with Mr. Hoover.

On the plane leaving Chicago, we found Billy Bennet, age 15, Alexandria, Va. Billy, a carrier for The Washington Post, was on his way West to spend a week trout fishing in Yellowstone Park and Boulder, with his granddad, who met Billy in Billings, Mont.

We stopped off in Bismarck, N. Dak., to inspect Garrison Dam, with special reference to plans by the Army engineers for developing recreational areas.

In Bismarck, in company with 10 other rod and gun newswriters, we were greeted by Gov. Fred D. Aandahl, and through his courtesy, State and Government engineers showed us plans for the development of Garrison Dam.

DEVIATING about 50 miles from our flight course and flying low over the dam site, we had ample opportunity to study the probable effect the dam would have on the surrounding country.

Continuing our flight to Billings, Mont., we spent the night.

The party headed for the mountains in private cars, driven by game wardens and members of the Forest Service. Breakfast of trout was served by the Red Lodge, Mont., Commercial Club, with cocktails later on Beartooth Mountain served from a bar made of snow at 10,400-foot elevation.

In the vicinity of Red Lodge, we located numerous snowwater-fed lakes at elevations ranging from 6000 to 9000 feet. Most of the lakes are filled with our Eastern trout. Stopping along the route we fished one unnamed lake for ten minutes, catching six brook trout, each about one pound in weight.

Squad of 40 May Be Cut After Drill

Los Angeles, Aug. 11.—That question of just how good are these 20-odd rookies in the Washington Redskin summer training camp at Occidental College will be at least partially answered tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Turk Edwards and his staff, whose eyes have lighted up frequently during the last week as these young giants fresh from college have gone through their paces, will order out shoulder pads and helmets tomorrow for a game-size scrimmage.

With all the basic elements of the Redskins' attack soundly indoctrinated in the last week, the squad of more than 40 players should make a large afternoon of it. Something like 500 plays, including variations, already have been dished out to the squad.

In the crowd of rookies, Edwards hopes to find some stars that will take the Skins into the National League playoff (not to mention a victory in the Los Angeles charity game with the Rams at the Coliseum on September 5).

Freshmen backs who have stood out so far include Jim Hefti, Frank Holmes, Bob Musick and George Wilde.

The untested linemen have in their midst such fine performers as Fred Boensch, Bert Dressler, Paul Grayson, Henry Harris, Cluff White and Ernie Williamson, tackles; Hugh Taylor, George Brodston, Joe Duckworth, and Paul McKee, ends; Mike Garzoni, Bernie Brosky and Leo Nobile, guards, and Don Bunge, Lon McCormick and Earl Wheeler, centers. And that list doesn't include Tommy Mont, Joe Tereshinski and Bill Gray, who are back at Chicago preparing for the All-Star game.

Edwards will mix these youngsters with the old hands during the afternoon and something is bound to give because the squad has to be cut to 35 by the opening of the league season.

Tuesday's showing doesn't necessarily mean a wholesale slash in the squad. The Redskins have their big intra-squad test in the East vs. West clash at Santa Ana in a charity game on August 30.

Kid's 'Kneepants' Series Draws 2000

Contracts Control Morals and Hours

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Twenty-four of the only ballplayers in the Nation whose contract stipulates that they must be in bed by 10 p. m. and must attend Sunday School each week, clash at Dunn, N. C., tomorrow night in the "Little World Series" of the Kneepants League.

Organized in 1916 to combat juvenile delinquency, the league has blossomed out into a uniformed, four-team circuit. Each team carries 14 youngsters for the eight-week season.

Herbert B. Taylor, founder and czar of all matters pertaining to the Kneepantsers, handles all negotiations. No remuneration is involved, but Taylor takes the league on a picnic each year and picks up the check for the hot dogs and lemonade.

THERE'S NO TRIFLING in enforcing terms of the contract. The athletes, no less than 8 and no older than 14, also must agree to abide by the umpire's decisions and not intentionally hurt any smaller boys.

And just to make matters ironclad, Taylor has the Kneepantsers' parents sign a pact agreeing that they will help to carry out loop "rules."

Interest throughout the city of Dunn, a cotton farming community of 5000, is at a peak and an overflow throng of 2000 is expected to view the cream of the league's player talent collide tomorrow.

The local barber shop serves as the "command post" for Operation Kneepants, but tonight there was little attention given to barbering. All discussion centered on the respective abilities of the Cardinals and the Indians, the all-star aggregations.

Mayor and General Loop Graduates

THE SHOP WINDOW serves as league scoreboard, with daily averages also posted.

Since the league's inception, 1200 boys have signed contracts with Taylor. And not a single youngster has been in serious court trouble since.

Earl Westbrook, current mayor, is a graduate of the league. So is Gen. William C. Lee, who helped to organize the Army's airborne training during World War II. Dozens of the Kneepantsers have gone on to triumphs in organized baseball.

Mike Denikos Wins Trophy

"I guess I was awfully lucky but I must have made some plays that Gerry Priddy might have messed up," the stocky youngster said. "The award was a big surprise to me."

Mike Denikos, second baseman of the crack Washington Union Printers baseball team, was the center of an admiring group when he arrived for work at The Washington Post yesterday.

He carried a gold trophy which he received at St. Paul for being the second most valuable player in the Union Printers national tournament.

A former All-High football and baseball player at Central, 23-year-old Denikos ran wild at St. Paul.

He stole ten bases and led the Washington team in scoring. His fielding won him the award.

Washington won 5 and lost 2 in reaching the finals, finishing second to St. Paul.

Denikos was full of praise for the winner of the most valuable player trophy, Pitcher Klink Hoium, of St. Paul. Hoium won four games to set a new tournament pitching record.

"We'll get him next year, though," smiled Mike, as he walked off clutching his trophy.

All other "invalids" with the National Leaguers, including rookies Ralph Tate of Oklahoma A. & M., and Fred Neilsen of St. Mary's, and veteran Fullback Walter Schlinkman, participated.

Eisler Indictment Dismissal Defeated

Sister Repeats Story Communist Agent Came Here to Help "Stupid' U. S. Reds

Justice James W. Morris of District Court yesterday denied a motion to dismiss the passport-fraud indictment against Gerhart Eisler, whose trial is drawing to a close.

Yesterday's session was devoted to rebuttal witnesses, and to argument by rival attorneys. Today, argument will be heard on a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

In the afternoon, the jury will return to hear Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz sum up his case and give the reasons why he believes Eisler defrauded the Government of its right to know Eisler's background when in 1946, he filled out an alien exit permit.

The trial of the German Communist, reputed to be the Kremlin's chief agent here, is in its fifth week. He is free under bond from a prevoious conviction of contempt of Congress.

Eisler's sister and avowed political enemy, Mme. Ruth Fischer, returned to the witness stand and repeated earlier testimony that in 1933 Eisler told her he was coming to this country to show the "idiotically stupid" American Communists how to run things.

Robert Lamphere, special agent for the FBI, said he had Eisler under surveillance on suspicion that he was anagent of the Comintern as soon as Eisler arrived here.

Eisler's attorneys argued that the questions on which he is charged with giving fraudulent answers were vague and ambiguous. One question demanded what names the defendant used, and he answered merely Gerhart Eisler. Another asked where Eisler had lived and he omitted the fact that he had been in this country in the 1930s. A third asked what organizations he belonged to, and Eisler replied "none."

Alexandria Man Waives Hearing in Murder Case

Builder Remanded For Grand Jury Action In Shooting Ex-Wife's Husband in Home

Walter Ray Mathis, 40, Alexandria building contractor charged with murder of his former wife's husband, was yesterday remanded to jail to await grand jury action at Essex, Baltimore County, Md.

Police said he confessed and has reenacted the slaying of Kenneth Eugene Colbert, 31, steelworker, of suburban Baltimore, on Saturday night. The fatal struggle marked the first meeting of the successive husbands of the former Ruby Bondurant, 30, one-time Alexandria telephone operator.

Mathis is accused of having shot Colbert in the leg during an argument in the victim's apartment. Colbert died within a few minutes from loss of blood when the bullet severed a main artery.

Magistrate T. Frank Martin, of Essex, ordered Mathis held without bail when the calmly composed defendant waived preliminary hearing on the murder charge.

The brief hearing, however, was too much of an ordeal for both the defendant's wife, widow of his victim, and his present wife, who both became hysterical.

Mrs. Pearl Mims Mathis, present wife, screamed "I can't stand this" and fell from her front-row chair when her husband stepped up to waive hearing. She was taken to the Judge's chamber and calmed.

Mrs. Ruby Mathis Colbert collapsed shortly after the proceedings and was likewise cared for by friends.

A short time before the court proceedings, the widow told reporters that she had met Mathis secretly "several" times since their divorce in May, 1946, and had constantly feared his meeting with her husband.

She denied she had a date to meet him on a street corner Saturday, as Mathis had told police in his confession, and said he was always "bothering" her.

Mrs. Pearl Mathis, the building contractor's first wife, whom he divorced to marry Ruby and then remarried after his second divorce, complained, however, that "it was Ruby who wouldn't let my husband alone."

Lieut. Russell Hawes, chief of Alexandria detectives, said Mathis had freely admitted firing two shots in a scuffle with Colbert at 9:30 p. m. in the steelworker's Middle River, Md., apartment.

In the confession, however, he said he did not know Colbert had died until told so by his brother-in-law, Claude Dempsey, of Franconia, Va., at 4 a. m., Sunday.

Alexandria and Fairfax County police arrested Mathis at 6 a. m. Sunday in the Dempsey home, where he had gone after telling his present wife he had shot Colbert.

Mrs. Elmer F. Floyd of 17 Victoria rd., Victoria Villa, Middle River, yesterday described the part her husband and friends had after the shooting.

She said she, her husband, and two neighbors, Neil M. Bolton of 1233 Broadway st., Baltimore, and Francis Hunt of 1205 Fuselage ave., Victoria Villa, were seated on their porch across the street from the Colbert home when they heard the argument.

"There was a shot, and then the second shot came several minutes later," she declared. "Then this man ran out to the car, which was parked with its lights on and the motor running. My husband told Bolton to chase the car while he went in to see what happened.

"He found Colbert with his head in a closet. He apparently staggered and fell part way in the closet."

In the meantime, Bolton drove after the fleeing automobile long enough to get its license number, which enabled police to trace it to Mathis.

Mathis' marital tangles began in 1936 when he divorced his first wife after eight years of marriage to wed Ruby. At the divoree, he was given custody of their son, Walter, jr., now 14, and she the daughter, Myrtle, now 17, married and living in Florida.

The building contractor said he lived happily with Ruby until he entered military service in 1942. While he was serving as a staff sergeant in the Army Transport Command, China-Burma-India theater, he said, Ruby met and lived with Colbert.

He said that he forgave her and resumed martial relations with her on his return to civilian life but obtained a divorce when he found her pregnant with Colbert's child. One child, Robert, now 9 and living at the Mathis Alexandria home, was born of his marriage with Ruby.

The Colbert child, a 4-month-old daughter, was with her mother in Lambert's Tavern, near this home, during the shooting, police said. Police said the mother told them her husband had gone home to obtain a change of diapers for the infant just before the shooting.

3 District Men Held in Md. Robbery Case

Bond Set at $10,000 For Two of Trio in Cosman Gem Theft

Three Washington men were held for action of the Montgomery County Grand Jury yesterday in connection with the robbery of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cosman June 29 in Bethesda, Md.

Robert Lee Brinn, 22, and George C. Neal, 18, both of 1422 Harvard st. nw., were held in $10,000 bond each by Trial Magistrate Warren Browning on charges of armed robbery. They were returned to the Prince Georges County Jail after the hearing.

John A. Mullen, 38, 2000 D st. ne. was held in bond of $1500 on charges of conspiracy.

The trio is awaiting action of the Prince Georges County Grand Jury in connection with another robbery, whose victims were Mr. and Mrs. Spruce Baird, 2705 Arundel rd., Mount Rainier, Md., July 10.

The Cosmans said they were robbed of jewelry valued at $3000 and an automobile by two armed men who tied them up and then ransacked the house. Cosman said he did not have his spectacles on at the time of the robbery and could not identify the suspects, while Mrs. Cosman said her face was buried in the pillow.

Cosman said he had entertained Brinn at his home about a month prior to the robbery.

Detective Sergt. William Whalen of Bethesda substation testified that Neal admitted having taken the money and jewelry and that he had abandoned the car near Silver Spring. Brinn, however, had denied participation in the crime, he said.

Brinn said he has two witnesses who can testify that he was at home at the time of the robbery, but was unable to get them to court because notice of the hearing was too short.

Detective Cpl. Carroll Miller of Bethesda said Neal told him that the pair actually were looking for $100,000 they thought Cosman had in the house, but that despite a search they could not find the money.

Holdup Men Make Hauls On Weekend

Robbers Force Man To Take Off Shoes To Prevent His Following Them

Holdup men and burglars were active in Washington over the week-end.

Albert E. Atwater, jr., of 2201 Massachusetts ave. nw., reported he was grabbed and slugged by two men early yesterday morning in the 2000 block of Q st nw.

Removed Shoes

Atwater said the pair took his billfold containing $32 and a pen and pencil set. He told police they removed his shoes and ordered him not to follow before they fled.

Mrs. Hazel Jordan, of 11 L st. ne., reported the theft of a silver trumpet, valued at $200, from her residence sometime Sunday. The thieves forced their entry through a kitchen window.

Three Fined $500 In Eastern Shore Drive on Gambling

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Stating that three men had been fined $500 apiece on charges of possessing illegal slot machines, State's Attorney Charles Edmondson said today that county officials are pressing a drive against gambling devices in Dorchester County.

He said a man identified as Gilbert Bradley had paid a $500 fine Saturday after pleading guilty before Trial Magistrate J. Richard Jones. Sheriff Waldo Robinson said he had identified a slot machine as belonging to Bradley during an investigation into another case.

In previous raids by Sheriff Robinson, two machines were seized recently at Hooper's Island. Fines of $500 were imposed in each case, Edmondson said.

At Ocean City, Md., Worcester County Sheriff Arthur W. Duer said he had seized at least 15 slot machines at that Eastern Shore resort and that 12 defendants have each been fined $50 and $2.50 costs by Magistrate James B. Robins after hearings on charges of possessing the gambling devices.

Tomato Blight Causing Concern To Md. Packers

Easton, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Tomato blight "more serious than official reports indicate" is causing pessimism among some Maryland packers.

The Tri-State Packers Association, Inc., predicted that the Maryland pack this year will be considerably less than early expectations.

A spokesman for the association said, "Many farmers do not bother to send sample of damaged tomatoes for confirmation of infestation. Still, infestation is doubtlessly worse than official reports and may be even as bad as the National Canners Association report of epidemic conditions in and around the tri-State area (Maryland, Virginia and Delaware)."

The late growing season was given as another reason for the probable disappointment in store for Maryland packers. The associations estimated that the volume-packing season would be three weeks shorter than normal.

Two Injured On Platform By Streetcar

Door of Trolley Kicked Open by Unidentified Passenger

Two persons standing on a streetcar loading platform on Benning rd. near 21st st. ne. received undetermined injuries yesterday when they were struck by the middle door of a moving streetcar.

Police said the door was kicked open by an unidentified passenger who apparently feared he would be carried past his stop. The operator received no signal to stop, according to police, and the impatient passenger left through the open door before he could be stopped.

Policeman Injured

The injured persons were Yancey Warren, 20, 1811 Stanton ter. se., who was admitted to Casualty Hospital with possible internal injuries, and Miss Virginia L. Loving, 28, of 2112 I st. ne., who said she would see a private doctor.

The operator of the streetcar was Peter Chames, 29, 4063 Grant st. ne. The incident occurred at 1:50 p. m.

Another traffic accident yesterday injured Pvt. Allan W. Anderson of the Traffic Division at about 2:05 p. m. as he rode a motor scooter at Half and M sts. se. in pursuit of the driver of a similar vehicle.

Skids In Avoiding Collision

Anderson's scooter skidded as he tried to avoid collision with a pickup truck operated by Heron Todd, 1331 Half st sw., and he was thrown to the pavement, suffering a sprained knee and back and thigh bruises.

He was admitted for observation to Emergency Hospital. His condition was reported not serious.

At about 2:30 p. m., Moses Jefferies, jr., 12 of 3757 Foote st. ne., looked back while riding a bicycle in the 600 block of K st. ne. He struck the rear of a parked car, and was thrown into the path of a car operated by Carl T. Bentley, 29, 774 Kenilworth ter. ne.

500 Veterans Get Bargains At Surplus Sale

Keenest interest—among the more than 500 who turned out—was stirred by 7-man, 65-pound life rafts and junior-sized, one-passenger rafts. The big ones, 6 feet by 14 feet, originally $220 apiece, sold at $27; the smaller ones, formerly $93, went at $9 each.

Walter F. Seeger, a Veterans' Administartion employe of Brookmont, Md., bought one each and, quicker than that, converted the jumbo raft into a backyard wading pool for his two youngsters.

Louis Randolph Hildebrand of Riverdale, Md., who used to be a seaman, 2d class, bought one to "fish." He said it cost him about as much to rent one over the week-end as to buy one of his own.

Study Urged On Optometry Practices Here

Commissioners Asked To Consider Possible New Legislation

Increased activities in unethical practices evading the District's optometry law were reported to the District Commissioners yesterday by the District of Columbia Board of Optometry.

In an annual report filed with the Commissioners, the board asked that the Commissioners study the possibility of recommending new legislation to protect District citizens against such practices, most of which stem from "so-called bait cut-rate advertising" in the newspapers and over the radio.

Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin, secretary-treasurer of the board, pointed out that the board is powerless to act in cases where snap eye examinations are given although much more thorough examinations are indicated.

Present law makes the board responsible for licensing optometrists and provides penalties for those who practise without a license. It does not, however, give the board power to take action in cases of misleading advertising or carelessness and neglect on the part of the optometrists.

Seattle (U.P.).—A drive to raise $25,000 for a children's ward in the proposed American Memorial Hospital at St. Lo, France, has been started in Seattle. Hospital facilities in the town were destroyed in the pulverizing bombardment of the Normandy campaign.

Wrong Buick on Ocean Leaves All Concerned at Sea

The distance between John P. Costianes' 1946 Buick and Brazil yesterday was a lot closer than a solution to the confusion which sent it there.

Costianes' automobile was aboard ship enroute to Rio by mistake. The car which should have been on its way is a 1947 Buick owned by Lieut. Col. Jose Vincente de Faris Lima of the Brazilian Aeronautical Commission here.

The mixup started when Mrs. Othella Pompfer, a secretary at the commission, drove the wrong car away from a parking place after calling the American Automobile Association and having new keys made when the ones to the colonel's new car refused to open the doors of the Costianes' Buick.

Asssistant United States District Attorney John B. Diamond 3d yesterday said the matter was out of his hands and added there would be no prosecution because there was no criminal intent.

Attorney Harold L. Schilz, speaking for Colonel Lima and Attorney Samuel Kamerow for Costianes, conferred with principals in the mixup yesterday. Kamerow said his client was concerned largely with difficulty of replacement of his seagoing car, adding that other questions involved include the "nervous strain" and "inconvenience" under which the situation has placed his client. Also, it was added, there are now attorney fees to consider.

As for reprieving the Brazil-bound car, Diamond's best offer was to bring the car back himself—if they'd pay expenses and arrange a "vacation."

H. T. Shannon, Jr.

War Veteran Hangs Self In His Home

The victim was Herbert T. Shannon, jr., son of the late Herbert T. Shannon founder of the Shannon & Luchs Co., 1505 H st. nw.

Shannon, who went "through every European battle," according to his family, was discovered hanging by a bedsheet from an overhead pipe by his 26-year-old wife of one year, Mrs. Lottie Shannon. Mother of a 7year-old daughter by a previous marriage, Mrs. Shannon is expecting another child in October.

No Motive Revealed

Although they described him as a "thoughtful, quiet type of person," members of Shannon's family were unable to supply any motive for the suicide. Police said there were no notes.

A sister-in-law, Mrs. William E. Shannon, 6401 Maple ave., Chevy Chase, Md., said he had "been through a great deal in the war" but was never wounded. She said he'd won eight battle stars for campaigns all through Europe and "all the way through Africa."

A close friend of the family, who asked to remain unidentified, described Shannon as a "casualty of the war." He said the youth was in "excellent shape mentally, physically and otherwise" but expressed the view his "battle experience" suddenly "backfired."

Shannon spent more than five years in the Army Corps of Engineers, three of them overseas and more than 30 months in combat areas. A technical sergeant, he was discharged in 1945.

A brother, William E. Shannon, 32, now president of the Shannon & Luche Co., said Herbert seemed rather moody after his return from the wars but was apparently quite "happy" in his marriage. He said he was "learning the real estate business" as a carpenter with the Barkley Construction Co., preparatory to entering the family firm.

Studied in Evening

Shannon attended Woodrow Wilson High School and since June 20 had been studying blueprint reading and estimating in the evening at Columbia Technical Institute.

In addition to his widow and his brother, William, Shannon is survived b yhis mother, Mrs. Herbert T. Shannon, sr., of 1618 Kalmia rd. nw.; another brother, Foster Shannon, 2441 40th st. nw., and two sisters, Mrs. S. J. Hanford, 7025 Strathmore st., Chevy Chase, Md., and Mrs. Myron H. Paum, whose husband is a coach of the New York Giants football team.

Funeral services will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral home. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Budwesky Denies Delay On School Sites

Former Alexandria City Manager Carl Bdwesky denied in a detailed and lengthy report yesterday that he had been "either dilatory or negligent" in acquiring sites for Alexandria schools.

He protested that his actions during the five years he had been trying to get school land had been sound. In reply to council's criticism that quicker purchase of land for three schools now contemplated would have meant less cost to the city, he said that (1) the higher cost today of at least one of these areas is a direct result of recent rezoning by the council, and (2) no purchases now pending were ordered earlier than February, 1946.

The occasion for the report was council's demand on July 29 for a complete report from Budwesky on all correspondence received by him and action taken on the matter of school sites since 1941. At the meeting, the council indicated it thought that slow progress had cost the city money.

Budwesky pointe dout that prior to February, 1945, council had ordered him only to acquire playground space for two schools. He noted that he had accomplished one order and that council had tabled the other because of excessive cost.

He reported that the same month council authorized him to negotiate for property for two new schools, and later in the year for a third. All this was acquired, except two tracts which were priced too high, he said. The city attorney was told to start condemnation proceedings against one owner, he said, while council decided to examine the other case personally.

To date the city has acquired the site for only one of the schools. It was not the land originally recommended.

Mayor W. T. Wilkins said he was not sure whether the report would be discussed at the special meeting of council tonight. Scheduled for hearing is a proposed amendment to the zoning ordinance to allow the Braddock Light and Power Co. to build a 50 million dollars power plant in the city, with buildings up to 125 feet high.

Chest Funds Continue to 57 Agencies Next Year

No Organization Will Be Eliminated Until Reappraisal Of District Needs

1. Directed the board's executive committee to submit a statement listing reasons for considering any reorganization proposal.

2. Asked the executive committee to submit, with the reasons, a possible plan of reorganization.

3. Ordered next year's Chest and Council of Social Agencies administrative funds lumped into one budgetary item, subject to later allocation.

1 Defunct Organization

The last action was prompted by a recommendation last week by a joint committee of four Chest and four Social Agencies representatives that activities of the two bodies be more closely coordinated.

The trustees, in approving next year's chest membership, followed their executive committee's recommendations. Recreation Services, Inc., which has been liquidated, is the only change from the present membership.

President Lee D. Butler, in the executive committee report, said the committee decided to take no adverse action on the applications of the various agencies to participate in the 1948 chest for two reasons:

1. To afford all chest agencies opportunity to "benefit by the discussion and criticism" which has been leveled at them and the chest during the past year.

Will Reappraise Work

2. To give the administration of the Chest or a new organization "an opportunity to make a thoroughgoing and objective appraisal of the functions of the Chest and its agencies and to decide the best way to meet the Chest's obligations to the contributing public and to the welfare needs of the community."

The hour-long meeting was generally peaceful, although several trustees raised critical questions about the proposed Chest reorganization.

Henry Beitscher, representative of the Washington Industrial Union Council, charged that the Citizens' Study Committee, as originally set up to survey the Chest, was predominantly made up of businessmen and real estate men.

G. Howland Shaw, president of the Bureau of Rehabilitation, who proposed the motion for the executive committee to submit reasons for reorganization, asserted "dispersions" had been made against professional social workers, during the Chest controversy, and that he regarded it important that social workers not be relegated to "an inferior position" in any new setup.

President Butler said another trustees meeting will be called when the reorganization plans can be perfected.

$30,000 Needed For Unit's Fight On Tuberculosis

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Governor Lane disclosed today Dr. Robert H. Riley, director of health, informed him the Mount Wilson Sanatorium surigical unit needed $30,000 more to carry on its fight against tuberculosis.

The chief executive, in a statement discussing various steps conditions, said he was "certain taken to improve State sanitorium the board of public works will consider favorably" the request for the funds.

He said he had learned before taking office from physician friends that for most of the five preceding years all chest surgery had been discontinued at Mount Wilson Sanatorium and the surgical unit closed. Previously, an average of 40 chest operations were performed each month.

The governor said plans were moving ahead for reestablishing the surigical unit and that some of the State's foremost surgeons besides physicians on the board of health had volunteered their services as advisers in the new sanatorium set-up.

Jap Beetle Plague Faces DDT Spraying

Berryville, Va., Aug. 11.—The Japanese beetle plague has become so intense in Clarke County that County Agent J. W. Olcott plans to spray DDT by airplane.

He estimates that 30,000 acres in this county alone have been destroyed this year, and that already the beetles are laying their eggs in the ground to be hatched next May. But with the employment of the DDT, he hopes that the beetles will be killed off before the grubs can turn into another generation of beetles in the spring. An estimated $4 an acre will do the trick.

Hero Chaplain Retires From Army

Milwaukee (U.P.). — A veteran Army chaplain who was the first to introduce the Easter sunrise service has been retired after 43 years.

Chaplain Gustav Stearns was wounded in the first World War and was given a personal citation from Gen. John J. Pershing for "gallantry in action in burying the dead under heavy shell fire" in France.

The 1946-47 "Who's Who in America" devotes 25 lines to the famed Milwaukee Protestant chaplain. He estimated recently that he had officiated at more than 1700 veterans' funerals and ministered to veterans of five wars while at the soldiers' home here.

He was also the first clergyman in the United States to promote Christmas carol singing in front of the homes of the sick, and in hospitals.

Gimbel Takes 10,000 Orphans to Circus

Philadelphia, (U.P.). — Ten thousand orphaned, underprivileged and crippled children tagged along when Ellis A. Gimbel, Philadelphia philanthropist and department store executive, went to the circus.

The squealing youngsters consumed hundreds of pounds of peanuts, popcorn, ice cream and candy—all provided by Gimbel.

Moviegoer Crashes Gate from Inside

He awoke five hours after the last show and the theater was both dark and locked.

Schneider groped to a telephone in the foyer and called police. A street sergeant came and started shouting instructions to Schneider through the door.

Finally, Schneider was guided to a door which unlocks from the inside and was freed.

(U.P.).—The "three R's" may be riding, rotating and repartee when truck and taxi drivers get together at the University of British Columbia for a summer course in driving and traffic safety. Enrollment will be limited to 50 students at $10 a head and it is hoped to make the course an annual event.

His Blood Saved Her Life

The Washington Post

DONOR THANKED—Pvt. John A. Ronayne of 3410 B st. se., receives thanks from Mrs. W. Ralph Grooms of 1927 U pl. se. Private Ronayne contributed a quantity of his Type O blood to Mrs. Grooms, following delivery of her baby girl Sunday. Several other policeman also volunteered for the transfusion after an appeal was sent out on the police teletype

Concert Season Begins Here In October

The National Symphony Orchestra of Washington, D. C. will inaugurate its seventeenth (1748-48) season of concerts in October.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, said the local series at Constitution Hall will comprise 10 concerts on Wednesday nights, all subscription, and 12 on Sunday afternoons. In addition, nine concerts will be given in Baltimore in the orchestra's sixteenth season there.

Artists scheduled to appear as soloists with the orchestra during the coming season, Kindler said, include:

Pianists Rubenstein, Myra Hess, Vronsky and Babin, Moiseiwitsch, Templeton, Gorodnitzki and Pressler.

Singers Pinza, MacWatters, Varnay and Carter.

Scheduled as guest conductors are Georges Enesco, Igor Stravinsky, Tauno Hannikainen and Howard Mitchell.

Special performances by the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the Hurok Ballet have been scheduled, the conductor said. In addition, the orchestra will give its annual series of Students' Concerts in District high schools and will play 50 concerts on tour throughout the Northeastern States and through the South.

Prowl Cars Improved

Duluth, Minn. (U.P.). — Police patrol cars in Duluth now are equipped with two strips of seven-foot-long balsam wood insulation, wide enough to hold a person. The strips were installed to replace blankets previously used for injured persons in the belief they would be more comfortable.

Mother Meets Policeman Blood Donor

Mr. and Mrs. W. Ralph Grooms, of 1927 U pl. se., yesterday met the policeman whose prompt response to an appeal for blood may have saved her life, after the delivery of a baby girl on Sunday.

Pvt. John A. Romayne, who has been on the police force less than a year, was chosen from several police volunteers because his blood, like Mrs. Groom's, was of Type O and had a negative Rh factor.

Dr. John R. Dull, a former police doctor, who delivered the baby about 10 a. m. Sunday, found Mrs. Grooms was suffering serious hemorrhages, and suggested to Grooms that the police be called in on the case when he was unable to find the right type of blood.

Grooms found it easy to do that, as his father, William C. Grooms, is a policeman in the Third Precinct. Before Policeman Grooms' appeal went on the police teletype, Pvt. Romayne, also serving in the Third Precinct, heard about it and hurried to Sibley Hospital.

Three other policemen arrived at about the same time, and the teletype message brought so many responses that the hospital had to phone a cancellation a few minutes after the message was sent out.

Private Romayne did not see the woman who received his blood, or her husband, until a Washington Post reporter persuaded the modest policeman to visit the hospital again yesterday. He was warmly thanked by the couple.

"TWO LINES IN THE POST... Two bull pups SOLD by 9 a.m." reports Mrs. Flather

Here's Mrs. B. S. Flather, 4008 Nicholson Street, Hyattsville, with "Donny" and "Topper," two of the pedigreed bulldogs she raises for pleasure and profit. The "profit" part comes when she advertises extra pups in The Washington Post—like the other day, for instance. There were two surplus pups, so she ran a two-line ad in The Post.

"One buyer came at 7:45 a. m. the first day my ad appeared, the other at 9. What's more, they were both out-of-towners; they drove all the way in from Purcellville and Patuxent. Each pup brought $50. Yes, I'm definitely a satisfied user of Post 'Pets For Sale' ads!"

Whether you're in the pet-raising business or merely interested in selling a single dog, cat or canary, let an ad in The Post help you find a buyer. Cost is low, effectiveness is high.

Belgian Midas Gets Up Steam At Dinnertime

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

EVEN in sultry August, Washington is crammed with extraordinarily interesting people. For instance, there's a bright Belgian who wields yes-or-no over an international piggy bank splitting at the seams with six billions in gold (NOT banknotes!), yet takes time out to whip up his supper in a pressure cooker!

His name is Camille Gutt, and as chairman of the International Monetary Fund he presides over a staff of 300-plus in an H st. office. He still ranks as a Belgian Minister of State, and as post war Minister of Finance he achieved a world-wide reputation for monetary wizardy. By retiring prewar and occupation banknotes and replacing them with new money, he kept Belgium out of a financial tailspin. M. Gutt's triumph is so admired in less skillfully piloted France that his battle against inflation is called "L'experience Gutt."

Mme. Gutt, who, happily for Washington, is returning in the autumn, remained in Belgium throughout the German occupation, working indefatigably for the Red Cross and playing a dangerously important role in the resistance movement. Her husband carried on in England and on several occasions she underwent relentless Gestapo inquisition. A fighter of Amazonian caliber, Mme. Gutt routed the Gestapo in disorder with her sharp tongue.

Camille Gutt, who's short, sports a toothbrush moustache and a delicious wit, is constantly, as he calls it, "slimming." After surviving four operations he sticks to the most obliging diet—all the meat and alcohol desired, but no sweets. Feminine friends, have angled in vain for a Gutt-cooked repast. His pressure cooker is strictly a one-man job.

Expansion of Charm

A GROUP of American editors returned from a tour of China a few days ago. To the uninitiated their political double-talk was practically unintelligible.

From among the serious discussion of communism, floods, crop failures and such disasters, we retrieved a single frivolous plum. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, an observing editor estimated, has gained at least 20 pounds! But, he added hastily and somewhat enigmatically, the Madame has lost none of her old charm.

Summer vacationists are beginning to trickle back from Europe with queer oddments of information. The roads in Holland and Belgium, they report, are studded with new Buicks. Americans hankering after cars will turn vert with envy when they hear there are 1946 Buick taxis in The Hague.

Paris prices should soothe complaints about our skyrocketing costs. Evening dresses range to 80,000 and 90,000 francs—or up to $1000 at the legal rate of exchange—afternoon dresses about $400, simple hats about $60—all these, of course, at the smart couturiers. Most in vogue milliner is Paulette, who's stressing velvet turbans, dripping dangles. Jacques Fath specializes in dressy evening gowns becoming to many "shapes"; the much-publicized Christian Dior doesn't bother with an but the extra slim.

Dior's revolutionary styles, stressing ballooning skirts, have a behind-the-scenes explanation. He's backed by Marcel Boussac, a textile manufacturer. Through Dior, Boussac is going to launch a new perfume in New York this winter. And a successful perfume picks up more coin than the most prosperous dressmaker.

All the well-heeled fashionables are making tracks to a new, tiny restaurant called Vefour, near the Palais Royale, and the same rounders are still spending after midnight hours at Florence and Les Ambassaduers. Much looked at beauties are Mme. Lou de la Riviere, once briefly a mannequin, and Peggy Healy, a former New York model now Senhora de Salles of Rio. Peggy's new in Paris but for years she was lethargically pursued by Terence Phillips, a sad-eyed Britisher much used as extra man in Gotham's trifle-more-than-middle-aged cafe society.

Stranded Wives, Missing Men

FROM Moscow via Paris come two sad stories told by Greek Ambassador Politis, dean of the Soviet capital's diplomatic corps.

Two years ago the Ambassador married a Russian woman. This summer, for the first time since their marriage, his work took him out of Russia. A diplomat, plus being dean of the diplomatic corps, he envisaged no difficulty about taking his wife with him. But, to his utter consternation, the Soviets turned down his request for a passport. He was forced to leave Mme. Politis behind in Moscow. When his tour of duty as Ambassador is over it looks as though he would either have to live in Moscow or abandon his wife.

Before leaving Moscow, Ambassador Politis invited a vice commissar named Dekhanozov to dine. Eight days passed without a reply. Chancing to see Molotov, Politis asked why the vice commissar had ignored the invitation. Molotov replied he didn't know the whereabouts of Dekhanozov. The dinner was given without him.

Since then no one has heard of the unfortunate Russian—another vice commissar had evidently bitten the dust.

TWO presidential candidates for the head of "Girls Nation"—a simulated government established by teen agers from 41 States under the auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary—conferred with Gen. George C. Marshall on State Department problems yesterday. Mary Gay Woodruff of Warrensburg, Mo., candidate for the presidency of the Federalist Party, beams brightly when shaking hands with the Secretary of State, while George Ann Hicks of Edmond, Okla., (center), candidate for the head of the Nationalist Party, awaits her turn. Occasion was General Marshall's informal address yesterday to the 82 girls in the State Department's Auditorium

Study Facts Before Forming Opinion

Marshall Bids Students 'Be Tolerant'

By Genevieve Reynolds

Secretary of State, Gen. George C. Marshall yesterday cautioned 82 members of "Girls Nation" to collect facts before forming opinions on international problems and to be very tolerant in their thoughts about other countries.

Sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, Girls Nation is a six-day school for citizenship training. The teen-age representatives from 41 States are setting up a mock government, complete with parties and officers, patterned after the Federal structure.

Addressing the group in the State Department auditorium, the Secretary said, "I suggest that you don't have much in the way of opinion now. Collect as much information and as many facts as possible. What you want are all the facts you can get before forming an opinion.

"Be very tolerant in your thoughts toward other countries," he continued. "It is easy to be provoked and irritated with actions of other nations when away from the scene of trouble. Nations are sensitive. We must be patient."

Pointing out that he was keenly aware of conditions overseas, General Marshall twice stressed. "I doubt if you realize how fortunate you are in holding a meeting of this sort. It is most unusual and remarkable in the world today."

"Comparatively speaking we have everything," he asserted. "It is very difficult for us to judge points of view aboard accurately and logically."

"You can be too emotional," he warned. "That is dangerous business. The State Department cannot be emotional. It must deal with facts, then allow our representatives to act on them."

As the Secretary of State entered the auditorium, the audience spontaneously broke into song with, "How do you do General Marshall, how do you do." He answered with a big smile and "thank you."

Views on Peace

Immediately following General Marshall's talk, which was recorded for a "Voice of America" broadcast, several of the youthful petticoat politicians aired their views on peace with William A. Wood, Acting Chief of the Radio Branch, Division of Public Liasion for the State Department.

Elizabeth Ann Buchanan of Temple, Texas, said that she and her classmates agreed that lasting peace could be established mainly though the United Nations and better understanding of other peoples and their customs.

Sally Reardon of Freemont, Ohio, opined, "We girls hope for a better system of exchange students so that some day instead of a Girls Nation, maybe we can have a World Nation."

Paula McGinley of New London, Conn., said that she and her classmates believe that the first steps toward world peace are rehabilitation of war-torn countries, breaking down prejudice and lifting iron curtains.

Gwendolyn Yut, a pretty young girl of Chinese descent from Portland, Oreg., said that since this country has grown so rich and powerful, it should aid other nations to get on their feet.

Tour Capitol

Earlier in the day, representatives toured the Capitol, held a question session with Edward McGinnis, Sergeant of Arms of the Senate and other employes.

Last night they returned to headquarters in American University gymnasium to choose officers for their parties. George Ann Hicks of Edmond, Okla., presidential candidate for the Nationalist Party, and Mary Gay Woodruff of Warrensburg, Mo., presidential candidate for the Federalist Party, were piling up a close vote for the head of Girls State.

Voting continued long past midnight. Results will be announced today.

Egyptian Attache Is Supper Host

At a late supper party, Ibrahim E. Imam, Egyptian Attache, entertained last evening for about 40 guests. The fete served to say farewell to Representative Bertrand Gearhart, who is leaving soon for California, and to introduce the new Egyptian Military Attache, Col. Mohamed H. Heiba.

Guests were invited from 9 o'clock on, and a buffet supper was served after 10. The First Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Benard were invited, and Col. and Mrs. William Eddy. Miss Monks, Austin Higgins Are Married

A wedding of interest to Washington took place in Cohasset, Mass., last Saturday, when Miss Ellen Endicott Monks became the bride of Austin Douglas Higgins. Mrs. Higgins is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. George Gardner Monks of Lenox, Mass., and Cohasset. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar G. Higgins of Washington.

The afternoon wedding took place in St. Stephen's Church at 5 o'clock. The bride's father officiated at the ceremony, and her uncle, Robert Knowles, gave her in marriage. The bride wore ivory satin with heirloom rose point lace veil, coronet and mitts, and carried her mother's prayer book with cream roses.

Mrs. Burrage Warner of Lenox attended her cousin as matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Kirkpatrick, Miss Sue Anniss, Miss Marjory Colt, Miss Ann Horner, Miss Charlotte Harwood, Miss Doria Higgins, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Catherine Shults.

Deighton Higgins was his brother's best man. Ushers were Charles R. Hickox, jr., Edward Patterson, Roderic L. O'Connor, John Lindsey, Walter J. Taylor, Frank E. House 3d, and two brothers of the bride, George G. Monks, jr., and Robert A. G. Monks.

The bride was graduated from Winsor School, Boston, and has just completed her sophomore year at Vassar, class of '49. She is a member of the Vassar Club and the Boston Junior League. The bridegroom was graduated from Groton School and from Yale University, class of '43, where he was a member of Fence Club and Wolf's Head. During the war he served in the Pacific as a captain in the Army Air Forces.

The couple is now in Bermuda. On their return, they will make their home in Concord, N. H., where Mr. Higgins will teach at St. Paul's School.

On the Club Front . . .

Mrs. James D. (Marguerite M.) Hayes, legislative chairman for the newly organized National Cathedral Unit, American Legion Auxiliary, will be presented a national award during the auxiliary's annual conclave in New York, August 28 to September 1. She won the coveted prize, the first national one to go to the District auxiliary department, in a contest on the most constructive legislative program during the fiscal year 1946-47. Mrs. Harold Burdette will present the award in a colorful ceremony.

Mrs. Hayes' program was presented in the form of resolutions and dealt with 20 bills, primarily applicable to women veterans. Among her suggestions were right of preference for female medical personnel in veteran hospitals and protection for orphans and widows of veterans. She stressed the importance of protection for orphans in the District of Columbia and called for legislation that would abolish excessive attorney's fees and expensive, long-drawn-out litigation.

Before heading for the convention, Mrs. Hayes will fly to Bermuda with Mr. Hayes for a brief vacation.

JULIUS GARFINCKEL & CO. REPORTING

Selected by Vogue editors for an important New York fashion preview as one of the great coats of the year. Full, flaring, long — describing from head to hem the new triangle silhouette. It swings and sways as though it had a life of its own. It's a tent.

Hidden beneath its voluminous folds may be your tiny waist — tiniest waist ever seen in this century. Hidden beneath it may be your new long street skirt. No matter how long, this coat is longer. And the full skirt of your dress or suit remains uncrushed.

This is Mangone's kerchief collar coat, of Forstmann green-red-brown plaid tweed. Let your hat be close, turban-wrapped, to carry out the all-of-a-piece effect.

Comfort Makes News in Fall Furniture

Fall fashions in furniture are as comfortable as they are good-looking. A few easy moves convert these Uni-Dept chairs into a long couch, a studio couch, or a chaise longue.

Last word for comfortable reading in bed is this combination picture and lamp, one of a new series of Lightolier. The frame is enameled off-white and the "Colonial Rose" design is in soft colors.

Here's something new and ultra comfortable in a lounging chair for a man. The rear of the chair extends clear to the floor, doing away with the customary legs. Both chair and ottoman are covered with tweedy upholstery.

CONVENIENT containers for Papa's nails or Mama's buttons are made of metal with transparent plastic tops.

SO GOOD-LOOKING is a large round roaster with a mirror finish aluminum that it can be used as a salad or fruit bowl when you aren't using it for cooking. This is a large roaster—13 inches in diameter—that will take a 10-pound roast or an 8-pound turkey. A trivet is also available.

SMALL AND HANDY is a device for singeing chickens at home. It should have many other uses since it gives concentrated heat. A safety stand comes with it so that when the appliance is hot and not in use, there is no danger of burning the table. A five-foot cord makes it portable. Operation is on AC and DC.

NO LONGER need sticking ice trays annoy you. There's a liquid to put on the outside surfaces of the trays to prevent sticking owing to freezing. Just apply it liberally with a cloth or paper towel. There's no odor or taste imparted by this liquid.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

Will you please tell me how to clean and refinish a limed oak bedroom suite? E. H. R.

First step in refinishing this furniture is removing the old finish. This is quite a job. Use paint or varnish remover, applying it generously with a paint brush to a small area at a time. Allow it to stand until the finish is softened. Lift off old finish with a putty knife, holding the knife flat against the wood. Use burlap to rub finish from turnings and carvings, following with steel wool. Wear rubber gloves to protect your hands. Wash away the residue of the remover with turpentine after all the finish has been removed from the furniture.

Next bleach the wood, using a commercial wood bleach and following the manufacturer's directions exactly. Rinse with clear water to remove all bleach. When the wood is dry, sandpaper the surface with fine-grained sandpaper wrapped around a block of wood. Brush off the dust, or use a suction vacuum cleaner to draw it off.

Now rub on white lime or white lead or a coat of flat white paint. Wipe off almost at once, wiping against the grain. After a day or two of drying, apply a thin coat of shellac. Dry thoroughly. Sandpaper the surface lightly with fine grained paper. The final step is applying several coats of liquid wax.

I have a beautiful light blue rayon and silk tablecloth on which mustard was spilled. I tried to remove the spot with glycerine, but it did not come out. How else may the spot be removed without resorting to bleaching and redying? E. G. B.

Even though the mustard stain is stubborn, rubbing with glycerine then washing with soap and water may prove effective if you repeat the treatment several times. If the spot still won't come out, make a solution of two tablespoons of hydrogen peroxide and one gallon of water. Test the solution on a corner of the cloth to be sure it won't affect the color. Then soak the stain for a half hour or longer if necessary. Rinse twice.

How can I remove stains from a beige broadloom rug, caused by a small baby spitting up formula? A cloth dampened with cold water was used to wipe up the spots, but a white stain remains. D. W. T.

If the chief ingredient of the formula was milk, sponging the spot with carbon tetrachloride may remove it. Put a folded absorbent cloth under the rug and sponge liberally with the fluid. (Leave windows open while you're cleaning so fumes won't accumulate.) If this isn't thoroughly effective, try sponging with cloth wrung out in mild soapsuds and water. Rinse with cloth wrung out of clear water.

How can I remove paint from a black eyelet dress? The material is of the sheer marquisette type. I. L.

If the paint has hardened, apply lard or petroleum jelly on each side of the spot to soften it. Then sponge thoroughly with carbon tetrachloride over a pad of absorbent cloth.

What are the points to be considered in buying linoleum for a kitchen floor? O. A. H.

Durability of linoleum is directly related to the thickness of the surface. This is usually expressed by gauge. Heavy gauge (about 1/8 inch) should be purchased where there will be long hard wear, but standard gauge (5/64 inch) is used for ordinary household traffic. Be sure the linoleum you select is well seasoned. If it is, the surface will be too hard to be chipped off with a fingernail and not so hard as to crack when rolled. The backing can be either of burlap or good tough felt. Remember that color that goes through to the back of the linoleum will keep its original appearance longer than a surface printed pattern. Jaspe and mottled or marbled surfaces show less soil than a solid color or blocked pattern of light and dark colors. Medium color values show less soil than very light or dark colors.

I bought an expensive black balloon cloth dress last summer and since the first time it was washed, it has looked like something off the bargain counter. It has no body at all and gets full of wrinkles just hanging in the closet. Worst of all, it seems to carry an outer coating of lint. What can I do to make this dress look like the pretty garment it was when it was first bought?

Gum arabic solution should be helpful in restoring the body to this dress. Powdered gum arabic can be purchased at the drug store. Add 1 teaspoon of the arabic to a quart of boiling water and stir over a low heat until the arabic is dissolved. Dilute with about quart of cold water. Cool to lukewarm and dip your dress in it. After dipping, blot the dress between turkish towels and iron at once with warm iron.

A Clever Twist Creates a Costume or a Conversation Piece

The Scarf Returns—Bold, Bright, and Whimsical

By Peggy Preston

Giant scarfs of real silk, splashed with vivid colors and designs, are going to play an important role in the fashion picture this fall.

Reasons for their return to popularity are numerous. But most important is the fact that real silk, the fabric best suited for this type of accessory, has come down in price. It's now possible to get a yard-square scarf, hand-screened and hand-rolled in pure silk for as low at $6.95 or $7.95. Moreover, at this price, they successfully pass the most trying tests of washing and ironing, an absolute requisite of good scarfware.

Then too, someone has been giving out with some bright ideas for scarfs this year, both as to their design and the manner of wearing them. Fabric designers have set good artists to work on designs and these new, big scarfs depict everything from historic figures to skiers completing difficult turns in the snow.

Not Extras Anymore

The style setters are showing us dozens of ways to utilize the scarfs as accessories. In fact, some of these big squares are used in so many various ways that it is hardly fair to put them in the category of "extras." They make up into everything from a hat to a weskit.

Career gals will find scarfs useful. They can add a finishing touch to a weary black dress or suit with a clever, amusing scarf. Combined with costume jewelry, these big, soft, silky squares can transform an office dress into a cocktail ensemble.

But it probably will be the college girl who will give scarfs a real whirl this winter. That's because, being young and daring, they enjoy any fashion article that they can boldly twist around to suit their own personality. Here are some of the things they can do with scarfs:

Make handy pouch pockets from small scarfs by tying the opposite corners in big sailor knots over a slim belt.

Whimsy Has Place

Ruth Le Claire, Paris born artist who turned to scarf designing when she came to New York a few years ago, has had a whimsical hand in creating some of the clever novelty scarfs now on the markets. She thinks that scarfs, besides being becoming and useful accessories, can be "conversation pieces" if you select them for a definite date or activity in your life.

For instance, Miss Le Claire believes you can enliven a dull evening by wearing a scarf with designs that create attention. Her "Signature" scarf, for instance, bears copies of authentic signatures of dozens of famous persons ranging from Henry VIII to Edison. When the conversation drags—drag out your scarf and start looking up signatures, is the formula Miss Le Claire offers.

Or, when you invite friends in for bridge, tie a "Roulette" scarf around your basic black stand-by. Then, when the game begins, whip it off and presto! you have a perfect table cover.

Miss Fairall in Paris

Copies of old Godey fashion pictures are scattered over a background of white or chartreuse in this scarf. Worn here with a black faille suit, it is crossed at the neck and pulled around the waist to form a weskit. Simple to wash and iron it can eliminate that "clean house" problem that haunts the business girl

By Gilbert Rohland—The Washington Post

Here the same "Godey print" scarf is combined with a black faille suit, the jacket buttoned this time. Wrapped around the neck, ascot style, the ends are tied and allowed to flutter out at one side

Bright accent to this simple, black dress is a pure silk, gambling scarf called "Roulette" which comes in a combination of clear colors. Gay and sporting, it can be worn with both tweeds and black afternoon frocks. Our model pins it to her shoulder with a piece of costume jewelry, tucks it under her belt and lets it ripple down to the hem of her skirt

Fur Coat Tips—From Mouton to Mink

Generally speaking, fur of good quality is (1) bright and lustrous, (2) uniform in color, depth and texture, (3) soft and pliable on the leather side. A good skin is soft and supple but firm and strong.

Likewise, poorly dressed skins are generally harsh and brittle. Poor fur is likely to be (1) scrawny and uneven in appearance, (2) have matted areas, (3) be dull, faded or lifeless in color, (4) stiff fur or leather.

If the coat is well made, the places of hardest wear, such as the collar, cuffs, and front closing, should have pieces of the fur folded over rather than have extra pieces seamed in. These places should be protected by full thick hair, and in long-haired furs by plenty of guard hairs.

A fur coat should be loose and roomy, but comfortable, and should hang from the shoulders. A well-fitted fur coat never feels cumbersome or heavy. There should be no strain on the fur through the back, under the arms or in the sleeves. Undue strain will break and tear the skins.

Facial for Adolescent

If you can capture the 16-year-old boy about once a week and give his face a good cleansing with cold cream, then a good wash with hot, then cold water, you will do much to eliminate those blackheads that are so apt to appear at this age. The average boy washes his face in haste to get out. It is usually a haphazard job and mother's facial once a week will help a great deal.

In the Knitting Bag

An extra pocket in the knitting bag to hold the needles not in use is practical. Then there is no danger of splitting the wool or silk when putting the needles through so they will get lost.

Your Baby

See Doctor Ere School Days Start

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IF YOU are back from your vacation, it is good to begin thinking of those visits to the doctor and the dentist which shall put your child in condition for the coming school year. August is traditionally the month for such attentions.

Many a parent does not discover that her child has deficient eyesight until the child has failed in his first year of reading. Why wait until the child has suffered this year's handicap? Insure before he goes to school, and each year thereafter, that he is capable of seeing what children are supposed to see on the printed page and not some deformed letter, which he can never learn to recognize.

Children may not hear clearly enough to get the instructions of the teacher and yet be completely unaware of this handicap. How can the child who has never heard well know that he is different from other children? He only knows that despite his interest he cannot get the work and earns the title of "dumb," which bruises his spirit and frustrates his ambition.

If the child is seriously underweight, then he needs a thorough checkup to determine what factors may be at fault. It may be that he is progressing satisfactorily according to the weight and height group in which he belongs.

No longer is a child judged upon the basis of his age alone. He belongs in certain groups because of his general body build and though he may seem thin, if he is making weight advances regularly, he will not be considered underweight by old-time standards.

But the too-thin child can do with more rest, always. He needs to be spared too many extra-curricular activities in school. There are ways in which the alert mother may make food more interesting to him by saving him fatigue, by serving the food he likes and by not forcing him to eat more than he wants to eat willingly.

And, it goes without saying, that mothers will see that their preschool children are protected from those diseases for which there are proven immunities. All of these attentions in August will add up to a profitable and healthful school year.

Brush, Do Not Iron

It is a mistake to iron baby's outing flannel nightgowns and petticoats. Brush them thoroughly and you will retain that lovely softness associated with flannel, besides keeping the little garments in shape.

Throwing Shoes at Weddings Is Old Custom

I'll be merry whatever I do."

The custom of throwing an old shoe after the departing bride at a wedding involves a symbolism that concerns much more than good luck. In medieval times, shoes were very expensive, because the leather from which the soles and uppers were made took over a year to process from the raw hides. Leather shoes thus came to represent economic power, authority, and position. At an Anglo-Saxon wedding it was the custom for the father of the bride to present one of her shoes to the bridegroom. By this act he symbolized the transfer of his authority to the husband.

Nowadays we retain a vestige of the custom by throwing of shoes, or tying them to the back of the honeymoon automobile.

Two Billion Per Annum

Junior Beau Brummells Getting Big Wad of Dad's Annual Take

By Dorothy Carew

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Children are big business. Americans are spending well over two billion dollars a year on their boys and girls below teen age.

That doesn't count bubble gum and comic books, ice cream cones and movies or a thousand and one other incidentals—including cosmetics for the grammar school set!

The biggest slice of that expenditure goes for clothes. The total bill for boys' and girls' wear has moved up steadily since the beginning of the war. Sales in some cases are said to run as high as four times the 1939 level.

Serious Business

Furniture manufacturers are styling more pieces specially for the juvenile market; more jewelry is designed with children in mind; phonograph record makers see big possibilities in that field; there has been a complete change of approach in youngsters' books, and even cosmetics makers have developed a grammar school business.

Some students of the development of children's markets say the present trend in merchandising has gone hand in hand with new ideas of education, child care and feeding. It is designed to meet the needs of today's youngsters in terms that will appeal to them and to their parents as well.

In clothing, hand-me-downs used to be the rule. Today they are practically a thing of the past. Style has entered the picture and children want to be in the swim.

Girls' dresses used to be just girls' dresses. Now there are special designs for little tots and others for older age groups. There are chubby girls' styles and some manufacturers make sub-teen designs for girls on the threshold of the teen-age department.

Children's wear has followed the lead of the adult clothing market. Sportswear, spectator sports apparel, beach and play clothes and related items accounted for 150 million dollars in sales last year. This was on top of 120 million dollars for coats and another 150 million dollars for infant to teen-age dresses.

Startling Statistics

Here are trade estimates of some of the yearly bills parents are paying: All types of clothing for boys from 3 to 14 years old, 750 million dollars; shoes for infants, boys and girls, 387 million dollars; juvenile furniture, 40 million dollars; toys, 250 million dollars; baby foods and drugstore items including bottles, formulas and toilet goods, 300 million dollars; children's books, 200 million dollars; diaper services, $27,500,000, and children's cosmetics, 15 million dollars.

With an estimated eight million babies under 3 years of age today and the birth rate still heading upward, industry sources expect the children's business to expand even more.

In the Summer the Shampoo More Important Than Hair-Do

In Washington's mid-summer season the focus shifts from hair styling to hair care. Generally speaking, a new hair trend or style seldom appears at this time of year, but awaits presentation for the fall season.

Most important factor in summer hair grooming is the shampoo. There is no set rule about the number of times hair should be washed in a given period. It is sufficient to remember that the hair should be shampooed as often as it is necessary to keep it clean. If this involves two or three shampoos a week, as in the case of excessive oiliness, do so. Normal hair can be washed every week and dry hair about every 10 days.

For oily hair a shampoo prepared especially for this type of hair is in order. A soapless shampoo (saponified oil) is a good remedy for this condition as it reacts on the high acidity that causes oily dandruff.

For dry hair one may use an oil shampoo or, if this is too strong, a special cream can be recommended which will do a thorough cleansing job though it has no lather of its own. It reacts upon the hair as a cleansing cream on the skin and is treated so as to rinse off without having to be soaped out.

After hair is shampooed and while still damp, apply any pomade or scalp salve you desire. No ointments should be used on an oily scalp. If anything at all, a tonic can be applied to assist in counteracting oiliness.

For dry hair and scalp, apply a lanolin base pomade before going out in the sun. This may be used more sparingly on normal hair to prevent sun dryness. If salt water comes in contact with the hair it should be washed out after leaving the beach. Rinse hair thoroughly with warm water and if shampooing is not desired, a prepared cream rinse will leave hair soft and silky.

Hair that is dyed should be protected from the sun's rays and never allowed to be wet by salt water. These combined factors will discolor tinted hair and overbleach lightened hair to a strawlike condition. It is extremely difficult for even the most talented beautician to rejuvenate hair that has been subjected to such treatment.

Pravda Jumps U. S. 'Commercial' Press

Only Guarantee of Freedom Lies In Communal Ownership, Red Writes

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—David Zaslavsky, Pravda commentator, delivered an attack of nearly half a page today on the United States press, declaring it was not an organ of opinion and conviction, but a "commercial enterprise."

Pravda is the official organ of the Communist Party.

Zaslavsky's attack was in reaction to anarticle by Managing Editor Edwin L. James of the New York Times, who had criticized utterances of Alexander P. Morozov, Soviet delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

Morozov told the council's social committee Friday, August 1, that Russia had real freedom of the press and that the western nations did not. He said that the only guarantee of a free press lay in "communal ownership."

"Propaganda Gone Crazy"

(James commented in an article Sunday, August 3, that Morozov's presentation of the Russian press as a free press "is propaganda gone crazy."

("Moscow has never made any bones about its press policy," James wrote. "It regards the press as an instrument for the support of the Communist Party. It abhors what it calls objective journalism and allows to be printed what helps the regime along—nothing more. For example, Mr. Morozov's criticism of the western press was printed in New York. Criticism of the Russian press would not be printed in Moscow. In that circumstance lies all the explanation between the Russian and American press.")

The Pravda writer declared James asserted the United States Constitution and Bill of Rights "allow all United States citizens the right of lying and slandering, with no threat of punishment." (The James article made no such statement, but declared: "We have our Constitution and our Bill of Rights. We are not going to throw them overboard to please the Russians.")

Asking whether James spoke in the name of the owners of the New York Times or in the name of all American newsmen, Zaslavsky said: "James knows very well the International Congress of Journalists adopted a resolution on press freedom which asks that the press be protected against the uncontrolled, irresponsible influence of capitalistic monopoly."

(The International Organization of Journalists adopted at Prague June 6 a resolution declaring: "There must be free access to news and information for all journalists; journalists must have full freedom to write and publish news within restriction except for the requirements of decency . . .")

Zaslavsky declared James was "in the toils of his boss Sulzberger," and added: "At the present time we cannot consider James' words as his own—they are really the voice of his master-owner." (Arthur Hays Sulzberger is president and publisher of the New York Times.)

"We understand very well," he declared, "why the biggest agencies, the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service, so fiercely seek complete, unrestricted freedom for their irresponsible information—a full, unlimited right to penetrate all nations, have their agents everywhere, buy everywhere what they need to sell everywhere, things that are profitable to them."

Zaslavsky said he saw no difference between these three news agencies and oil companies who desired that "the whole world reek of American oil."

Then he turned to Kent Cooper, executive director and general manager of the Associated Press.

"Let James shout at the London Economist and see what this arch-bourgeois, arch-conservative magazine wrote December 1, 1944, about Cooper," continued Zaslavsky.

The Economist was quoted as saying that, if the world reacted the way Cooper wanted it to in his book "Barriers Down", democracy would be turning the world over to the Associated Press, et al.

Sees World Dominance

(The Economist attacked the press freedom campaign conducted by Cooper with a suggestion that his program might allow American news agencies to "dominate the world." Speaking of the demand for freedom of access to news, freedom for agencies to compete or to exchange news and an end to preferential rates of transmission, the magazine declared: "Mr. Cooper, like most big business executives, experiences a peculiar moral glow in finding that his idea of freedom coincides with his commercial advantage."

(Cooper commented: "Surely The Economist does not want the activities of all news agencies except the British confined to their own countries, as was largely the case before Reuters, reorganized and owned by the British newspapers, withdrew its cartel domination over the news activities of many countries foreign to England. If there is commercial advantage to an American news association in making its news service available in other countries there is, under the plan I advocate, the same opportunity for the British or any other news agency to make its news service available in other countries. For example, the Reuters agency was quick to see this and is now selling its news in the United States and South America for the first time. . . .")

"Maybe James will consider this (The Economist view) also a Russian conception," Zaslavsky wrote. "Not likely. This is a conception of the British monopoly press."

"The question of the dying influence of capitalistic monopolies in the newspaper world has been raised and these defenders of monopolies cannot escape it.

"No matter how angry James gets, this question is going to come up inevitably at international world congresses. The peoples want peace and the monopoly press is inflaming war in the interest of seizing markets and exploiting weak nations.

"We stand for the broadest freedom of the press which serves the people and belongs to the people. We stand for an honest press which is conscious of its responsibility. Such is our conception of the freedom of the press and its conception of real democracy."

Secure Nation or Lose All, Legion Is Told

Richmond, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, sounding the keynote for the twenty-ninth State convention of the American Legion, today declared that without real security for the Nation "all else stands in constant danger of being lost."

Speaking at the opening business session, the Marine Corps commandant, defined security as more than strength in arms and said it included "strength in statesmanship, in world diplomacy, in scientific research, in industry, in coordination of vital civilian phases and in the inner organization of the services themselves."

The general was introduced by Governor Tuck, who praised him for his war and peacetime services to the Nation.

Vandegrift, speaking to Legionnaires and auxiliaries assembled in John Marshall High School auditorium, warned against a repetition of national policy between World Wars I and II, when, he said, "we scrapped our fleet; we discarded our arms; we stripped out army; we deprecated our strength and advertised our weakness; we lulled ourselves into a sense of false security—and forgot."

Most of the business of the convention today was given over to reports from various committees and department and district officers.

One of the most wdeily distributed of the reports was that of Department Adjutant W. Glenn Elliott, who reported that 31 new posts had been chartered during the last year and predicted that at least 100 additional units could be formed during the coming year.

Elliott recommended that the department's 1947-48 membership quota be set at 75,000 members and stated that total membership in Virginia now stands at 43,811. To aid in the drive, the State adjutant recommended that three full-time representatives be employed to serve throughout the State in specially designated areas.

The annual report of Department Commander Robert B. Crawford reiterated his belief that the legion "is a veterans' organization with a glorious past, a wonderful program and an unlimited future."

Winchester Gas Line Check Slated

Winchester, Va., Aug. 11.—The city council is expected to draw up plans tomorrow night leading to an investigation of the pipe lines of the Consumers' Utilities Co., an affiliate of the Harrisonburg Gas Co., which serviced the beauty shop recently destroyed in an explosion.

City Manager Lee Grant's office expects that a copy of the Federal Bureau of Mines report on the Harrisonburg explosion, which killed 11 persons, will be available tomorrow night. The report disclosed that sections of the gas piping was seriously corroded.

The city council may request a map of the city's gas mains and household installations to determine if there is a condition in Winchester similar to that in Harrisonburg.

New Union Walks Past CIO Pickets At Md. Dockyard

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—George H. French, president of the Maryland Drydock Company's Fairfield yard, said more than 200 newly-organized supervisors reported for work today, passing through picket lines of a rival union without incident.

About 40 policemen were on hand to maintain order as nearly 200 pickets of Local 31, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO) marched outside the shipyard gates.

The supervisors broke away from the CIO union two weeks ago and now are organized as the Maryland Dry Dock Supervisors Association. The CIO still represents the remainder of 4500 workers who have been idle for 40 days seeking wage boosts, longer vacations and seniority rights.

Meanwhile, French said the company had offered $1000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for acts of vandalism against two Anne Arundel County homes early Sunday. One was the residence of Christian K. Mack, chairman of the board of the new supervisors association.

Bias Charged To Industrial Disease Board

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Governor Lane today sought the advice of Attorney General Hall Hammond on the complaint of a Cumberland textile workers' union that industrial disease compensation claims were handled improperly.

The Governor acted at the request of William Boyd Coleman, president of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO). In a letter to the Cheif Executive, Coleman charged the medical board for occupational diseases was operating in a "one-sided manner."

Lane said he would ask the attorney general whether the board complained of came under the State Industrial Accident Commission.

"If so, then I will ask the commission to examine operations of the board. However, if the board is a separate agency, then I will have the attorney general suggest a method of precedure to correct any faults that may appear," he said.

At Baltimore, Dr. J. W. Pierson, a member of the board, said he had received no word on the subject from Coleman and preferred to withhold comment for the present.

Coleman told the Governor that "physicians representing claimants have been ridiculed" and that one doctor, whom he did not identify, had said he would never appear again before the board.

The union official said his group's 8500 members, employed by the Celanese Corp. at Cumberland, were subject to occupational diseases.

6 of Va. Sect Go to Jail for Snake Ritual

Jonesville, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—Six members of a faith healers sect sat silently today as they were sentenced to jail and fined for violating a State law prohibiting snake handling and then began serving time by singing and praying.

The sect members, two of whom were women, offered no defense against the charges. They remained silent as J. O. Woodward, sitting for Trial Justice George Credlin, sentenced them to 30 days and fines of $50 each. No appeals were noted.

Two witnesses were put on the stand by Commonwealth's Attorney Joseph Credlin. Both of them were State police who had been ordered to the area of Stone Creek where the sect holds its services.

J. W. Harrison, one of the witnesses, was patrolling the area and stopped at the faith healers' meeting place about 11 miles from Jonesville. He said he saw four of the defendants, Paul Dotson of Penn Lee, Macel Thompson of St. Charles, Mary Lee Scott, Pennington Gap, and Flora Nolan of Cawood, Ky., handling a copperhead snake.

Second Snake Killed

The reptile was passed among the crowd, he said, before it was finally knocked down by the trooper's nightstick and killed. Harrison then arrested the four and radioed for help. Additional police arrived and the sect members were taken to the Jonesville jail.

Their arrival there was the signal for a second and more noisy demonstration as 50 or 60 faith healers, whose worship includes handling of snakes, began singing and clanging cymbals. In the midst of the confusion a second copperhead suddenly appeared and was being handed around by the sect members before police rushed in with nightsticks and killed it.

In an effort to halt snake handling, which has resulted in several deaths in the past, the extra session of the General Assembly last January passed a law forbidding such practices.

Fish Die by Scores

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Scores of dead fish floated in Antietam Creek today, indicating possible pollution of the stream. Residents of the vicinity said many fish were flopping about in the middle of the stream, while others already dead were scattered along the banks.

Firemen Convene Today

Newport News, Va., Aug. 11 (AP). Delegates from all parts of the Old Dominion poured into Newport News today for the five-day convention of the Virginia State Firemen's Association and its ladies' auxiliary. About 2000 were expected for the largest convention ever held here.

Formal opening of the convention will be tomorrow morning, but the city already was decorated with flags and bunting. Chief L. A. Ballard of Salem, president, will preside at all general meetings. Representatives are being sent by 58 cities and towns.

School Help Needed

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 11.—The "Help Wanted" sign is out in front of the rural one-and two-room schools here. School Superintendent Price E. Clark has appealed for applicants for cleaning and fire-building jobs. He said the monthly pay is about $11 for one-room schools and reaches $20 for two-room schools.

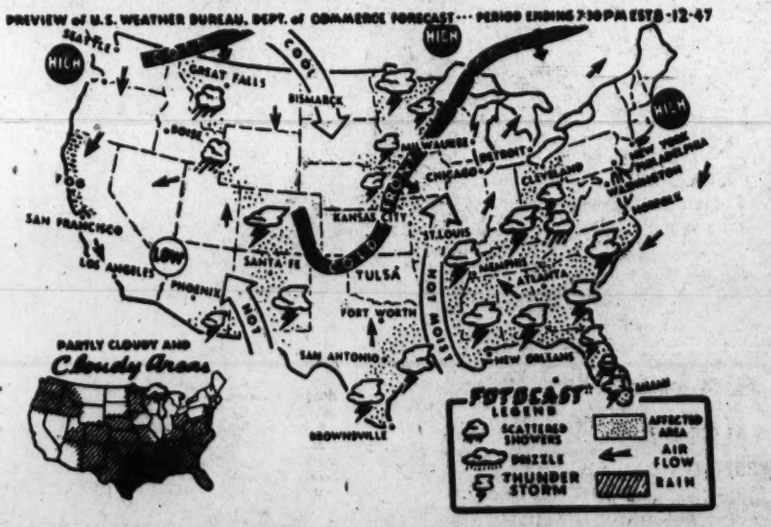
National Weather Summary

Copyr., 1947, Edw. L. A. Wagner



24-HOUR SUMMARY: Highest temperatures this afternoon will be in the 80s from Maine to the Ohio Valley and Virginia as cool air from the North Atlantic flows around the high pressure cell off the New England Coast. Coolest weather in the Nation is scheduled for the Northern Plains, where afternoon temperatures will be in the 70s as cool air from central Canada sweeps in behind the cold air front from Wisconsin to Texas.

Wheather experts see no relief in sight for the scorched Southern and Central Plains and the corn belt. Maximum temperatures in this area will be 90 degrees or higher with clear to partly cloudy skies. Many sections of Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and Kansas will see the mercury climb above 100 degrees. Warm southerly winds will bring afternoon temperatures to 90 degrees or higher in the Gulf States and the Lakes region.

The scientists say the high pressure cell off the Washington-Oregon coast is responsible for the air flows which are bringing a drought to the Plains States while the Far West enjoys comfortable weather. Warm, dry south to southwest winds blow across the Plains States when this high cell is near the Northwest Coast, but when this cell moves out to sea south to southeast winds bring rains to the Plains.

Warm air from the Gulf of Mexico will pick up moisture, rise into towering clouds and release showers and thunderstorms over the Gulf States, the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and along the east slopes of the Rockies. (See FOTOCAST.)

Highest temperatures this afternoon will range from 109 degrees at Las Vegas to 69 at Oakland, Calif. Maximum forecasts include St. Louis, 103; Kansas City and Tulsa, 100; Chicago, 98; Detroit, 96; Milwaukee, 94; Buffalo, 92; Atlanta, Nashville, Cleveland and Albany, 90; Pittsburgh, 89; Washington, 88; Philadelphia, 86; Hartford, 85; New York, 84, and Boston, 83.

Suggestion For Ending Racket in "Used" 1947 Cars

The other day we ran an item about the difficulty in buying new cars. W. M. O'C. reacts with this startling suggestion:

"Obviously, there aren't enough new cars to go around. But the situation is being aggravated by the black market in new cars. Anybody who can afford to be clipped, can get a '47 tomorrow.

"I think the auto manufacturers could stop this racket if they really wanted to. There are probably several methods, but this one occurred to me.

"Let each manufacturer require a purchaser to give the manufacturer first option at repurchase of the car. The customer could keep his car as long as he wished, but if he ever wanted to sell it, the manufacturer would get first crack at it.

"This would put an immediate stop to the practice of getting on a dozen lists, and turning each delivery over to a used car lot at a fancy profit.

"Stamping out the black market wouldn't make a new car available for everybody that wanted one—but it would certainly help to limit deliveries to legitimate purchasers at legitimate prices."

STREET SCENE

Alice M. Thomas of 2462 Tunlaw rd. nw., served as our reporter for this one:

"Just as we were pulling away from 18th and K sts., a lady's hat blew out of the bus window.

"She dashed from the bus at the next stop, no doubt intending to go back and search for her bonnet. But the driver of the bus immediately behind us had anticipated her.

"He had stopped his vehicle, picked up the hat and then followed our bus, waiting for a frantic female to emerge.

"When she did, he ceremoniously returned the wayward lid and we all got a big kick out of the look of surprise on the girl's face."

MAIL BAG

Mrs. Bruce H. Smith, of 1636 Abingdon dr., Alexandria, Va., thinks that I'm a "platter fan," and that some of my phrases can be traced to current hits. She writes:

". . . on July 26 you used the phrase 'you've just got to,' etc. That sounded as if you were thinking of "you've just got to have another cigarette' from the song 'Smoke.' Am I right?"

Nope—there's another explanation. The composing room gratuitously added the word "just" for me, and I let it remain because it seemed to help the sentence.

GEE—THANKS!

James A. Elliot, of 7101 Chestnut st. nw., tells a wonderful story about how he got back to this country from Shanghai, where he'd been sent on State Department business.

He went to the War Shipping Administration and said he was ready to go back, but WSA's reaction was noncommittal. It might be a month or more before they'd have anything for him.

So Jim went around to see the Navy, and the next day he was on the high seas, bound for the United States.

Four months after he got home, Jim got a note from WSA.

"We'll have a berth for you next month."

GREAT OPEN SPACES

Barbara Sunday, of 2115 H st. nw., reports that in the window of a Connecticut ave. dress shop you can see a sign which reads:

"Beach Wear—one fourth off."

Hemingway Wants Obit With Punch

Before Ernest Hemingway went to Europe to cover the invasion of France, he told me that if anything should happen to him I should go to Brown's gymnasium and get a statement about him from Mr. Brown. Hemingway wasn't concerned with what obit writers would say about his place in American letters. But he did want one fact made clear—a fact which Mr. Brown could substantiate—that Hemingway had a fast left jab and a hard right cross.

Ursula Parrott once lunched at the Ritz-Carlton and tried to pay the bill with a $10 check she wrote. The head waiter seemed hesitant about presenting the check to the manager for approval . . . "If you have any doubts about the check being good," said Mrs. Parrott, "get me a copy of the morning paper." From the newspaper she tore a news story, illustrated with a photo of her, and attached it to the check. The news story reported that Twentieth Century-Fox had just paid $50,000 for the movie rights to Ursula Parrott's newest story.

Aldous Huxley treasures only one newspaper clipping about his writing career. The distinguished author-member of one of Britain's most distinguished families, the Eton and Oxford graduate who is a member of the exclusive Athenaeum Club in London, the author of "Crome Yellow," "Point Counter Point" and a score of other novels which brought him literary eminence, treasures the clipping from Variety which reported: "Ill in Pix: Al Huxley."

In a movie fan magazine some years ago Betty Grable confessed that her suppressed desire was to have a date with Vincent Sheean. It was published while Colonel Sheean was in Africa, and it brought him the kind of respect which no enlisted man ever gave to another officer . . . One night I saw Betty Grable and her husband, Harry James, in the Stork Club. I introduced Sheean to them. Their response was blank. They never had heard of Vincent Sheean, and confessed that a press agent had ghosted the magazine article. "In fact," Mrs. James confided, "the only Sheean I ever heard of is Winnie Sheehan" . . . "Oh, well," shrugged Vincent Sheean, "the only James I ever heard of is Henry James."

During the war an Army film-writing unit boasted a number of noted authors among its enlisted men. They included William Saroyan, Irwin Shaw, John Wexley and Ivan Goff. Their lieutenant often would line them up, then pace up and down before them, with his hands folded behind his back, and snarl orders at them. "I know they're all going to write books after the war is over, and that I'll be the villain," the lieutenant later confessed. "So I decided that when those books are sold to the movies, I'd like to be portrayed by my favorite actor, Charles Laughton."

Jerome Beatty once agreed to ghost-write a series of articles by John Barrymore, for the American Magazine. Barrymore signed a contract to sit in conference with Beatty every day. There was no stipulation as to the number of hours Barrymore would devote to Beatty. Another time-guide was selected—one bottle of Scotch, and Barrymore would work only until the bottle was empty.

The late Sherwood Anderson confided that he at first was unhappy whenever people confused him with Robert Sherwood or Maxwell Anderson. "But in the later years, they did a lot to build me up," said Anderson. He delighted in discussing White House secrets with wide-eyed listeners who mistook him for Bob Sherwood. "And as for Maxwell Anderson," said Sherwood Anderson, "many's the good-looking blonde I told I was writing a part in a play especially for her."

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

Organist

The organist provides the world . . . With music soft and sweet . . . Except the one who grinds it with . . . A monkey on the street . . . And sometimes too except the one . . . Who plays it with his breath . . . And being just an amateur . . . He bores a guy to death . . . But in the theater, at home . . . In school or in the church . . . His talent is a thing for which . . . All audiences search . . . He gives to every melody . . . That deep, impressive sound . . . That rises to the rafters and . . . That echoes all around . . . And when his fingers touch the keys . . . Wherever people pray . . . The angels seem to catch his tune . . . And carry it away.
